CONGRESS.

The Mississippi Admission Bill Before the Senate.

A BITTER PERSONAL DEBATE.

UNDISGUISED TALK IN BOTH BRANCHES.

The Latest Appointments of Supreme Court Judges.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10—There is a great deal of speculation as to the chances of the confirmation of Messrs. STRONG and BRADLEY, just nominated for the Supreme Bench. The probability is that both will be confirmed. There is some opposition to Mr. BRADLEY on the ground of locality, but that will be overcome by the fact that he will take up his residence within the circuit to which he is appointed to work. There is no hesitancy in saying that in the matter of the recent decision in the legal tender case, both Mr. STRONG and Mr. BRADLEY have, on examining prior to their present appointment, given expression to views in consonance with those expressed in the dissenting opinion of Mr. Justice MILLER.

A SCENE OF DISORDER.

The greater part of the day in the House was taken up in the consideration of the Legislative and Executive Appropriations bill, during the course of which the most uproarious indecorum prevailed. For more than half an hour all attempts to preserve order, on the part of Mr. COLFAX, who occupied the Speaker's chair, were entirely unavailing. The House gave itself up to unparliamentary debate and a series of indecorous performances, and a scene of mixed merriment took place which almost baffles description. The immediate occasion of this scene of laughter and disorder was a skit between Mr. COX, of New-York, and Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts. Under the pretense of defending Mr. BUTLER, who had just offered a resolution to abolish the system of mileage pay, and who had been irrigated by Mr. FARNSWORTH and others on the ground of inhospitality, Mr. COX caricatured the gentleman from Massachusetts, who, by the way, stood within a few feet of the speaker, in his well-known style. In his remarks Mr. COX said that he would defend the Massachusetts member against the assaults made upon him by gentlemen upon the Republican side, and in so doing he took occasion to touch upon his military career from Big Bethel to Dutch Gap, and he would scorn the imputation, he said that Mr. BUTLER had, while pretending to occupy his seat in Congress, visited Boston several times as counsel in a case for which he was the recipient of large fees. Amid great laughter and merriment, in which Messrs. BINGHAM, FARNSWORTH, PITCH and a large number of Republicans participated, as well as all the Democrats, Mr. BUTLER got the floor. In response, he said that he supposed that any one had the right to accept fees for professional labors, except those who had not the ability to earn them, and in reply to the gentleman from New-York he would merely say what might be heard from every boy in the street, and from all the hand organs—"Shoo Fly, Don't Bother Me." This was the signal for the renewal of a scene of laughter and disorder which has not been witnessed before upon the floor of the House this session. The gentleman upon both sides of the Chamber enjoyed equally the hilarity of the occasion, and gave themselves up to a perfect jubilee of fun, clapping their hands and stamping their feet. After the disorder had somewhat subsided, Mr. COX in an outburst of bad temper, got the floor, but was almost immediately called to order by Mr. HOAR, of Massachusetts. The progress made on the bill was comparatively small. The house seems disposed to overhaul everything very closely.

A SOLDIER OF THE REVOLUTION.

A genuine sensation took place upon the floor of the House to-day in the appearance of a revolutionary soldier named JAMES SPENCE, who was born in 1763 and was present at the surrender of CORNWALLIS. At the request of General HAWES, Mr. SPENCE was admitted to a seat upon the floor.

PERSONALITIES IN THE SENATE.

The Senate has at last acquired quite an unenviable distinction for bitter personality as the House. As Mr. SHERMAN remarked to-day, there has not been a period within many years when so much of this disreputable mode of disputation found place in the body as within the last month or six weeks. Mr. DRAKE this afternoon characterized the scene of to-day as "a degradation to the Senate." Honorable Senators would probably rise to personal explanations if so severe a censure as this were passed on them in any other place than the floor of the Chamber. The display of virulence and animosity which commenced on the discussion of the Virginia bill, to be renewed on the census measure yesterday, and continued on the case of Mississippi to-day, undoubtedly had its origin at a time dating far back of the introduction of any of these measures, and must be regarded as the culmination of all these little rivalries and strifes and bickerings which frequently occur to disturb the peace of Senators, however great and dignified. Mr. STEWART blames Mr. SUMNER; Mr. CONKLING blames him, Mr. TRUMBULL blames him. With all his faults there is hardly a better-natured man in the Senate than Mr. SUMNER. Mr. SUMNER said a few bitter things of Mr. STEWART, the severest, as Mr. CONKLING admits, the wound which rankles thereout, that he attempted to read him out of the Republican Party, when the Virginia bill was under discussion. Mr. STEWART, without much detriment to his part or his future, might have allowed this to pass without a reply, at least of the character he made then and to-day. Mr. TRUMBULL, too, allowed himself to be carried away on the tide of passion, and said some things which his friends regret. Mr. STEWART'S speech to-day was in exceedingly bad taste. There was no occasion in the world for the introduction of all the malignity with which he filled the close. Mr. SUMNER was placed in the position of defending his anti-slavery record on the assignment of Mr. STEWART. It was a very strange spectacle, particularly when the previous history of his Nevada constituent is recollected.

NOMINATIONS.

The following nominations were sent to the Senate to-day: CHAS. CLAYTON, to be Surveyor of Customs at San Francisco; SAMUEL GETTNIR, Supervising Inspector for the First District.

THE COMMERCE COMMITTEE.

The Committee on Commerce of the House had a long session to-day, at which a great deal of future legislation was mapped out. The River and Harbor Appropriation bill was talked over and it was agreed to refer the subject to a subcommittee. The New-York Port Warden' bill was not considered, or the general merchant marine. Mr. PARKER, of New-York, who claims that he hunted was the discoverer of a queer island in the South Pacific Ocean, about a dozen years ago, was heard through counsel on an application to allow her to protect the title of her husband, now dead, to the discoverer.

Dispatches to the Associated Press.

WAR REVENUE—DEALERS IN LEAF TOBACCO.

The following letter has been addressed by Commissioner DELANO to Supervisor WILLIAMS, at Lafayette, Indy:

SIR: I have received your letter of the 8th inst., in which you inquire if, under the construction of the sixty-third section of the act of July 20, 1868, relating to dealers in leaf tobacco, as given in my letter of August, MCNEILL of Ind. 18, a purchaser of a planter 500,000 pounds of leaf tobacco, and sells the same through R. Kennedy, a commission, both A and B being required to pay the special tax in the ter in leaf tobacco, whether both A and B would not be also liable to pay the tax of $5 per thousand on the excess of 50,000. In reply I have to state that the special tax in this case of $50 is a tax on the business, and every person who sells or offers for sale the tobacco, of in consideration to the extent of making such sale a business is held to be liable to pay this special tax of $50. Be additional for every $1,000 in excess of $1,000, is a tax imposed upon the amount of business transacted by the sales in excess of sixty-thousand, rather than on the business. In this case, such, it is expressly provided in paragraph No. 2 of the seventy-ninth section of the act of June 30, 1868, as amended, that in estimating the amount of sales for the purposes of said section any sales made by or through another person, acting as his commission, shall not be again estimated and included as shall be the party for whom the sale was made. The evident intent and scope of this promise was to limit the liability to a single assessment when only one sale was effected, and that sale was made through an agent, rather than the owner of the goods. The act of July 20, 1868, was repealed by the proviso to paragraph 5, section 79, of the act of June 30, 1864, before quoted, neither is there anyone inconsistent with any of the provisions of section 79, of the act of July 20, 1868. Dealers in leaf tobacco were, prior to the passage of the act mentioned, not, however, wholesale dealers, and in estimating the amount of their sales, were not required to include the sales made for them on commission. While, therefore, I hold that any person who engaged in the business of buying and selling leaf tobacco, though his sales are all made through an agent, factor or commission merchant, is liable to the special tax of $50, I do not regard him as liable to pay the tax of $5 on excess of sales above $50,000, when such agent, factor or commission merchant has made return of the same and paid the tax.

THE WHISKY INTEREST.

The Ways and Means Committee heard a large delegation this morning representing the whisky interest of Western Pennsylvania, Rye, Kentucky Bourbon and Tennessee. The Robinson County delegation state that there are 19,000,000 gallons of whisky in bond, which will not be ready for market under two or three years, and that its withdrawal and the payment of the tax as provided by the present law, would involve serious loss, and in many instances ruin to owners. The delegation urged that the time for withdrawal be made three years instead of one year.

FORTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

SECOND SESSION.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Thursday, Feb. 10.

Mr. SCHURZ introduced a joint resolution concerning colleges for the promotion of agriculture and the mechanic arts.

It provides that no State that has not received its proportion of the grant of land donated by the United States for agricultural and mechanical colleges shall in future receive such lands, unless the colleges to be established shall provide facilities for instruction for all without regard to race or color. Referred to the Committee on Education.

THE MARINE HOSPITAL SERVICE.

Mr. CHANDLER, from the Committee on Commerce, reported, with amendments, a bill to reorganize the Marine Hospital service.

It provides for the collection from masters and owners of two cents per day for each seaman on vessels of the United States arriving from a foreign port, or engaged in the coasting or inland vessel or coasting trade, who shall have been employed on such vessels since they were last entered at any United States port. All moneys so collected shall be paid into the Treasury, with the exception and be credited to the Marine Hospital fund. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to appoint a supervising Surgeon, a Surgeon of Marine Hospital service to have general control of the government hospitals, at a salary of $3,000 per annum and traveling expenses.

COMMERCE AMONG STATES.

Mr. CHANDLER, from the Committee on Commerce, reported favorably the bill to promote commerce among the States, &c., authorizing railways from the City of Washington to New-York, to Pittsburg and to Cincinnati, and telegraph lines from Washington to the two latter points.

MANUFACTURE OF PIG IRON.

The greater portion of the morning hour was consumed by Mr. SCOTT in refutation of the theories and statistics of the Special Commissioner of Internal Revenue, particularly as to the cost of the manufacture of pig iron. He protested against the right of an officer, clothed with the duty of collecting statistics for general information, to send to the Senate mutilated quotations and anonymous communications containing extensive statements of fact upon which Congress would be asked to base its legislation.

THE NAVAL APPROPRIATION.

Mr. MORRILL, of Maine, being awarded the floor, called up the bill making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the naval service for the present fiscal year.

Mr. MORRILL, of Maine, replied that the bill did not appropriate any money to the Navy Department, but placed at the disposal of the Bureaus of Navigation and Construction and Repair $1,000,000 taken from other Bureaus.

Mr. CRAGIN submitted an amendment to restrict the expenditures of the money to providing materials for carrying on the work and paying the employes of the Bureaus for which it was appropriated. Agreed to.

The bill was then passed.

MISSISSIPPI.

On motion of Mr. TRUMBULL the Mississippi bill was taken up. The question was stated by the Chair to be upon the amendment of the Committee to strike from the bill the preamble and all conditions, leaving the simple proposition to admit the State to representation.

Mr. TRUMBULL, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, from which the bill was reported, made the following amendment, in lieu of the proposition of the Committee, to strike out all of the bill except the enacting clause, and to substitute the following, namely, that the State Convention shall be deemed to be the voice of the State, the Constitution in the main, being adopted by an overwhelming majority of the people, and the bill which passed the House of Representatives, which passed the Senate, and which was vetoed by the President, be and the same is hereby adopted, with the exception of the fifth section, which is hereby stricken out, and the State of Mississippi is hereby admitted into the halls of Congress, and he therefore favored the imposition of conditions as a measure of prevention.

Mr. STEWART made an argument in favor of the prompt and unconditional representation of a State in Congress. He then proceeded to correct what he called a misapprehension of fact made by the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. SUMNER) during the debate on the Virginia bill. He said that in his controversy with the Senator from Illinois, (Mr. TRUMBULL) Mr. SUMNER had assumed to be the author of the proviso in the Reconstruction bill of 1867, concerning suffrage upon the ground of race. In assumption, Mr. SUMNER claimed credit, unfounded, he was shown by the official records of the proceedings of the House of Representatives, by which it appeared that the proviso referred to originated, in the House on the 13th of February, 1867, in a proviso which was offered by Mr. BINGHAM, of Ohio. This was prior to the time on which Mr. SUMNER claimed to have proposed the measure for the first time before a committee of the Senate. He noticed the Senator was preparing to reply, and he hoped his (Mr. STEWART) remarks would be an attempt to appropriate to himself the credit belonging to others would include some satisfactory reason for his failure or refusal to vote for the bill submitting the Fifteenth Amendment to the States.

Mr. SUMNER forwarded to the Clerk and had read a portion of the speech complained of by the Senator from Nevada (Mr. STEWART) and claimed that his assertion had been simply that upon his own motion the provision referred to had been matured. He denied that his claim was not as to its mere origin, but that it related to the maturity of the measure. He referred at length to his speeches and letters in favor of legislation which he had introduced and advocated at various times, all having for their object the establishment and enforcement of the principle of equal and impartial suffrage. He also read from numerous letters written and received by him, showing that upon the death of President LINCOLN he had labored to impress upon Mr. JOHNSON the necessity of adhering to the Congressional reconstruction policy and insuring the enfranchisement of the colored race of the South as the only means of future tranquillity in the South. Mr. JOHNSON, shortly after his accession to the Presidency, announced that his (JOHNSON'S) views upon reconstruction had exactly coincided with his own, and upon the faith of this assurance he (Mr. SUMNER) returned to his home. But, upon the President proving recreant, he had written to warn him of the danger of the threatened course and the evil consequences to result from it. At an early day he had written to assure numbers of the colored men of North Carolina and Georgia that the reconstructed State Governments in the South would be based solely upon the consent of the governed. He cited twelve speeches delivered by himself in Massachusetts, and at various places, in further vindication of his political course. In conclusion, he claimed that as early as Feb. 22, 1869, he had proposed in the Senate to require colored suffrage as the corner stone of reconstruction, and had followed it up every session of Congress. He referred to his speech touching his vote to Senator TRUMBULL in the personal controversy between that Senator and himself, and read from it approvingly various passages containing allusions of a personal character.

Mr. the Senator from Illinois presented by the pending bill had been therein provided for in the case of Virginia, and he hoped that the ground of argument would not be retraced; and in order to settle the controversy which had arisen, he recited the history of the initial reconstruction measures, showing that a caucus of Republican Senators was held, to which were referred all questions of difference, with the view to preserving Republican unity in the South. A Committee, appointed by this caucus, analyzed all the bills before the Senate, and agreed upon universal suffrage as the basis of the reconstruction, the only question being as to the manner in which it was to be carried out, and this being settled, the report of the Committee was adopted by the caucus, and a bill agreed upon, which was subsequently passed by the Senate. He believed the Senator from Massachusetts was among the first in the Senate to advocate the necessity of giving to the colored people of the South the right to vote, and why that should now be deemed necessary to be occupied an hour of time to prove that which could not be denied, he did not understand.

Mr. SUMNER said he had only replied to the attack of the Senator from Nevada, (Mr. STEWART.)

Mr. STEWART denied having made any attack, but asserted that the attack had been commenced by Mr. SUMNER, and, in proof of his assertion, read an extract from a recent speech of that Senator, as published in the Globe, denunciatory of himself for having deserted to the Democrats upon the question of Virginia's admission. It was idle to talk to the Senator from Massachusetts about occupying time in the Senate. He assumed to be the principal of the Senate, and was the only man who could lecture the Senate upon principle when it proposed to legislate. He (STEWART) had the attempt of so grand, so expensive and so impertinent a lecture to read him out of the party. He argued at some length that in the matter of the Fifteenth Amendment and other legislation he had stood with the Republican majority while Mr. SUMNER had opposed these measures.

Mr. DRAKE remarked that he had only one remark to make upon the question to-day, and that was to express what he thought was the general opinion of Senators—that for the Senate this was a day of degradation before the country.

Mr. THURMAN, referring to the statement of his colleague, (Mr. SHERMAN,) said it was a strange revelation in the country's history that the reconstruction measures, the most important ever enacted by Congress, had received form and purpose, not in the authorized constitutional body, but in the secret sessions of a party caucus.

Mr. TRUMBULL said he had no disposition to bandy words with any Senator, but felt himself called to make a personal statement. Some days ago he had replied by way of correction to certain gross misstatements by the Senator from Massachusetts, (Mr. SUMNER,) who, under the protect of a reply, had reiterated the charges which he (Mr. TRUMBULL) had shown could not be warranted by the official record. To-day the Senator from his controversy with the Senator from Nevada, (Mr. STEWART,) Mr. SUMNER had read and twice repeated the language formerly used by him as follows: "Do you not know that from the day the proposition for colored suffrage was first introduced into this Chamber down to its acceptance by the people, the Senator (meaning Mr. TRUMBULL) was its persistent enemy?" Mr. TRUMBULL said that before the speech was delivered in which this language occurred he had shown the Senate that he did not vote for the bills referred to; that not the slightest foundation for the charge existed. He now produced the record of yeas and nays on the question in proof of his assertion. Whether entitled to credit or discredit for his vote, was a totally different matter. He did so vote. He was then now say, in addition, that there was not a single amendment set in the statute book for which he did not vote from the beginning; and further, to his own knowledge, as Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, was committed all the Reconstruction bills prior to representation of the States. How, then, could it be said he had ever been the persistent enemy of reconstruction? He was a member of the caucus in regard to which the Senator from Ohio had borne his testimony that it was unanimously in favor of conferring suffrage upon the colored race of the South, and that the only question then was as to the best way of doing it. Referring to the language used by Mr. SUMNER imputing to him (Mr. TRUMBULL) an intention to deceive the Senate in the matter of the agreement some days previous, to take a vote upon the Virginia bill at a particular time, he said that Senator had intentionally sought to pervert and misconstrue the language of other Senators, while his own assertions would not bear the test of scrutiny. In conclusion he charged Mr. SUMNER with having, on certain measures, acted in alliance with the Democrats of the Senate to defeat the legislation of the Republican majority, because his own views had not been blindly accepted by his party associates. Particularly was this the case upon the Louisiana bill, which before the Senate some years ago, on which occasion the Senator from Massachusetts delayed the action of the Senate by dilatory motions—made some motions to adjourn. He (Mr. TRUMBULL) feared that bill, believing it would have been a great thing to have organized that State on the Union side during the war, and Mr. LINCOLN was of the same opinion, but the measure was opposed in the Senate by Mr. SUMNER and others, who were talking against time.

Mr. SUMNER said he had only one word to say in his military career, but in his economical career, commencing at Dutch Gap Canal and ending all the way down through every one connected with the army, it was the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. BUTLER) who made disorder.

Mr. BUTLER explained that his amendment did not restrict to the heirs of soldiers, but only to the mileage. He regretted that the fact of his ability to earn mileage to help himself should be used as an argument why anything should be paid to him more than to those who had not any ability to earn enough to carry them to their homes. (Laughter.) He was glad that in this great matter of economy there could be no argument against it, either by the gentleman from Illinois (FARNSWORTH) or by any other member, lest that insinuation against him which nobody dared speak out loud; and as to the member from New-York, (Mr. COX,) he would be glad to answer every boy on the street who could ask, by, Gee! look at my."

Mr. COX got the floor to reply. He had undertaken in a quiet way to defend the distinguished soldier from Massachusetts, and his reward was a sort of street negro minstrel remark. Why had he not answered the insinuation made by gentlemen in the House? Everybody on both sides of the House knew, and the country knew, that the gentleman was considered a bad man.

Mr. CASS, (interrupting)—Mr. COX waits a moment. I tried to do what his own friends dared not do. I defended the member from Massachusetts because the attacks were just made directly.

Mr. HOAR made the point that Mr. COX was transgressing the rules of the House.

The Chairman, (interrupting)—The gentleman's time has expired, otherwise the Chair would sustain the point of order.

Mr. STEVENSON claimed the floor.

Mr. COX—Give me half a minute to finish my sentence—only to say this one thing. (Calls to order.) The gentleman makes an attack upon me, and then hides himself like a bomb-proof soldier, as he is. (Renewed calls to order.) That is all.

Mr. STEVENSON reminded the House that there was already a serious proposition to abolish mileage, made by himself, and referred to the Committee on Mileage, of which he was a member, and he had hoped that the Committee would report a bill for the reformation or abolition of mileage.

The discussion went on for a considerable time, and was further participated in by Messrs. INGERSOLL, BECK, DAVIS, ELDRIDGE, TOWNSEND, LOGAN, DAWES of Washington Territory, KELSEY, SCHENCK and POLAND.

In the course of the discussion, Mr. COX again took the floor to reply to Mr. BUTLER. He asked why Mr. BUTLER did not attack his colleagues and make them call for a committee of investigation on his past ridiculous and past silent conduct? Did he not remember the Congressman of this Congress? Why did he stand here proscribed politically and socially? Why did he reserve all his fire for his friends, as he did in the army, and then, when attacked, retreat, like a bomb-proof soldier, and hide himself?

Mr. DAWES rose and called Mr. COX to order.

The CHAIRMAN—The gentleman's time is expired.

Mr. COX—Why did you (Mr. DAWES) not call your colleague to order when he made his irrelevant remarks?

At the close of the discussion, which at times was exceedingly amusing, the question was taken on Mr. BUTLER'S amendment, and it was rejected.

Various other items in the bill about Clerks to Committees, &c., gave rise to discussion. Finally, at 4:50 the Committee rose and the House adjourned.

THE NEWARK MURDER TRIAL.

The Testimony Closed.

The trial of LEONHARDT SCHOENE, for the murder of CORNELIUS STAHL, in Newark, was continued yesterday. The Court room was crowded, as on the preceding days. The prisoner looked more than usually anxious and despondent, the testimony given on Wednesday having been more pointed and positive than that previously given.

The first witness called was THOMAS ROTH, who was on the stand at the close of Wednesday's session. He testified that he went into Ryan's saloon on the night of the murder, and saw there the two men, SCHUMM and STAHL, and they finished drinks on the floor; he went into the street, and was not in the house when STAHL was stabbed. In the cross-examination yesterday morning he said he was a resident of Newark.

JOSEPH SIMON testified that he lived at Ryan's saloon at the time of the murder; he had been in jail a part of the time since then as a witness on this trial; he recollected the night of the stabbing; he was in company of the drinks between ROTH and SCHUMM, which agreed with accounts given by previous witnesses, and he also related what he knew of the affair before and after the stabbing; he said ROTH, SCHUMM and SCHUMM went up to STAHL and caught hold of him; they struggled a little, but the witness saw no stabbing; just a moment after SCHUMM came out of the saloon shaking and trembling; he said STAHL had been stabbed; he (Simon) went in and found STAHL on the floor; he had been stabbed; witness helped further to his feet; he was bleeding and groaned the wound; and also that STAHL had died in his arms; he was there when the wagon came; he said STAHL and SCHUMM were friends; he had seen them together; he had seen STAHL put his right hand in his pocket, and, when he again took hold of STAHL, he put his left hand around his neck; he was sober; he did not see any knives; he said the witness said that when SCHUMM and STAHL were on the floor STAHL was over SCHUMM; when they were on the floor STAHL was to WHEREAT and SCHUMM was behind; STAHL; SCHUMM went to STAHL again and attempted him; so; SCHUMM went to STAHL and SCHUMM had been good friends; they were lively and happy, and SCHUMM had been drinking with STAHL.

Officer GOTT testified to the fact that his attention was called to the house by the noise created by the fight; when he arrived at the house in company with Officer FISHER, STAHL lay in SCHUMM'S arms dead.

Detective TIMMES testified that he was called to the house in the house after the murder took place; he looked through the city for SCHUMM, but he had disappeared; the search was good of him, though the detective had other duty of a similar character; it was early in the month of January, when he was arrested by the witness in New-Haven, Conn.; when witness went to take the prisoner, the latter denied his name; said he was Carl Schoene; he said he was not a beer drinker, and had never known of STAHL; when witness took SCHUMM to a brewery named MARTIN witness spoke SCHUMM'S assumed name, (Wolfenschoeber,) upon which SCHUMM exclaimed, "Stop, stop, and treating him." On the way to Newark the prisoner confessed to a participation in the fight, but said he knew nothing about the stabbing. He said that he slept on the floor of a saloon that night of the murder. The witness testified also that when he arrested WHEREAT and ROTH their hands were covered with blood.

CARLETON FRANCKE identified a cap and blouse which were on the premises after the murder as the property of the prisoner.

Officer GERRY and Chief of Police CLARK testified to facts in the case, which were unimportant.

JACOB KIRK, recalled, testified that SCHUMM and STAHL had been good friends, as far as he knew.

Mr. GUILD, counsel for the prisoner, said that no evidence would be introduced on the part of the defence. The Court then adjourned to this morning, when the summing up will be heard.

Melancholy Suicide on the North River.

The ferry boat which left the slip at Hoboken for Barclay-street, in this City, at 8:15 last evening, was the scene of a melancholy suicide. When the boat had reached the middle of the river, a woman of more than ordinary beauty, elegantly attired, leaped from the bow of the boat into the river. She was caught in the wheel, and must have been horribly mangled. Her body descended forever beneath the waves in the presence of a number of horror-stricken passengers who witnessed the act of self-destruction before it could be prevented. She had been observed by the pilot of the boat upon his bow, but he did not allow the fatal leap. Learning what had occurred, the boat was stopped and precautions made to rescue the lady, but these could be made effective her life had been decided. She sat in the ladies' cabin for some while before going to the place from which she leaped, and during that time her conduct was so eccentric and betrayed so much agitation as to elicit remark. She directed her attention between a ring which she had upon the fourth finger of her left hand and a locket which she held in her hand to the pocket, or, when he again took hold of STAHL, he put his left hand around his neck; he said that when SCHUMM and STAHL were on the floor STAHL was over SCHUMM; when they were on the floor STAHL was to WHEREAT and SCHUMM was behind; STAHL; SCHUMM went to STAHL again and attempted him; so; SCHUMM went to STAHL and SCHUMM had been good friends; they were lively and happy, and SCHUMM had been drinking with STAHL.

Officer GOTT testified to the fact that his attention was called to the house by the noise created by the fight; when he arrived at the house in company with Officer FISHER, STAHL lay in SCHUMM'S arms dead.

Detective TIMMES testified that he was called to the house in the house after the murder took place; he looked through the city for SCHUMM, but he had disappeared; the search was good of him, though the detective had other duty of a similar character; it was early in the month of January, when he was arrested by the witness in New-Haven, Conn.; when witness went to take the prisoner, the latter denied his name; said he was Carl Schoene; he said he was not a beer drinker, and had never known of STAHL; when witness took SCHUMM to a brewery named MARTIN witness spoke SCHUMM'S assumed name, (Wolfenschoeber,) upon which SCHUMM exclaimed, "Stop, stop, and treating him." On the way to Newark the prisoner confessed to a participation in the fight, but said he knew nothing about the stabbing. He said that he slept on the floor of a saloon that night of the murder. The witness testified also that when he arrested WHEREAT and ROTH their hands were covered with blood.

CARLETON FRANCKE identified a cap and blouse which were on the premises after the murder as the property of the prisoner.

Officer GERRY and Chief of Police CLARK testified to facts in the case, which were unimportant.

JACOB KIRK, recalled, testified that SCHUMM and STAHL had been good friends, as far as he knew.

Mr. GUILD, counsel for the prisoner, said that no evidence would be introduced on the part of the defence. The Court then adjourned to this morning, when the summing up will be heard.

ALBANY.

Joint Convention of the Two Houses.

May Close Work—Reports of Bills—The Free Canals—The Gubernatorial Committee, &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Thursday, Feb. 10, 1870.

The feature of to-day's proceedings was the meeting of both Houses in Joint Convention to elect a Regent of the University and a Police Commissioner for New-York. In accordance with the decision of the Democratic caucus last evening, FRANCIS KERNAN, of Utica, was elected to the first position, and Judge BOSWORTH, of New-York, to the second. The Republicans casting their vote in a body for HENRY E. SPRAGUE, of Rochester, for Regent, and ex-Mayor BOOTH, of Brooklyn, for Commissioner. After the joint convention the Senate proceeded to elect a stenographer for that body. (ANDREW J. DIVINE,) and then took up the discussion of Senator MURRAY'S Excise bill, which occupied the remainder of the session.

IN MR. RAY.

The Assembly Committee on Grievances today presented a long report in the case of HENRY RAY, member from Ontario, arrested and taken to Troy to be used as a witness before the Grand Jury of Rensselaer County. After an elaborate review of the facts of the case and citation of numerous precedents, the Committee came to the unanimous conclusion that the privileges of members were invaded in the case of Mr. RAY, and they conclude their report by recommending that Judge FORTON who issued the attachment, District Attorney FRENCH, who applied for it, and Officer BRENNAN, who executed it, be summoned before the Bar of the House to receive such punishment as the House in its judgment shall see fit to impose. The report was read and made the special order for to-morrow morning.

BROOKLYN FERRIES AND BATHS.

The Commerce and Navigation Committee today reported favorably a bill to compel the Union Ferry Company to run boats every quarter of an hour after 11 o'clock at night on the Bridge and Catharine-street ferries. The Health Committee reported favorably a bill to authorize the Common Council of Brooklyn to establish and maintain public baths in that city.

COURT OF SPECIAL SESSIONS.

The bill to reorganize the Court of Special Sessions in New-York, so as to enable all the Police Justices to sit on the Bench of the Court in rotation, was introduced by Colonel MURPHY to-day and referred to the Committee on Cities.

THE CHARTER.

The New-York Charter has encountered such violent opposition from all quarters that it may be regarded as already dead and buried. This leaves the Democracy all at sea again in the middle of the season as to what shall be done to "reorganize the local Government of the City of New-York." Time is short, and it will not do to wait for the manufacture of a new charter, so the New-York delegation begin to talk of revivifying the old Charter of 1857, under which the Aldermanic "Ring" ruled the City and achieved fame and fortune. It is certain that whatever legislation, if any, shall be agreed upon with regard to New-York will result in placing the City in the hands of some kind of a "Ring," and the main question for taxpayers would appear to be whether it is better to continue power in the hands of the Ring that has already got rich and is now trying to be respectable, or to transfer it to a new and hungry set who have neither riches nor respectability to back them. If any one supposes that such men as HORTON, GENET, and CREAMER in the Senate, or PETER MITCHELL and his colleagues in the Assembly, oppose the present "Ring," or the Ring charter, from any desire to promote the interests of the people of New-York, or any interests but their own, he must be simple indeed. The whole thing is simply a "grab game" between the different political factions in New-York, and until the people of that City can devise some means to make the trade of politics less profitable in the Metropolis than it is now, it will be absurd to hope to better their condition by transferring power from one faction to the other.

THE GRINDING COMMITTEE.

The Speaker to-day announced the sub-Committee on the Whole, commonly called the "Grinding Committee," consisting of sixteen members, or two from each Judicial District. The notable feature in the organization of the Committee is that the Brooklyn delegation is ignored entirely, and the Republican members of the House almost entirely. The last was expected, but the first excites some comment. S.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 10.—The Assembly met this evening, and ordered several bills to a third reading, among them the bill to create a clerkship to the Board of Police Justices in New-York, with a salary equal to that of the Clerk of the Superior Court, which is $6,000. Mr. WHITE gave a thorough ventilation to the bill, showing it to be a barefaced swindle on the taxpayers of the City; that it was not needed nor asked for by the Police Justices themselves, who only met as a Board once a year, and who had heretofore hired a man to perform the duties of clerk for $250 per annum, and the same man would be glad to continue the work at the same rate. Notwithstanding this thorough exposure of the fraud, the Democrats went for the bill in a body, and secured the aid of one Republican, ALFORD, the representative of Syracuse salt, to help them through with the swindle. When this bill reaches Governor HOFFMAN'S hands, if it ever does, and he is called upon to sanction a law that gives a clerk for one day's work $5,250 more than his entire annual pay, he will be enabled to appreciate that joke about an "honest Democratic Legislature." The House also ordered to a third reading the bill compelling the Union Ferry Company to erect gates at their bridges, although the entire delegation from Brooklyn protested against it, and challenged the production of a single resident of that city who wished for safeguards, or who would regard them as anything else but nuisances.

Removal of the Niagara Frontier Police Commissioner.

ALBANY, Feb. 10.—GOVERNOR HOFFMAN has rendered a decision in the case of OBEDIAH J. GREEN, GALEON SHAW and JONATHAN G. BURLE, Commissioners of the Niagara Frontier Police, trading them guilty of using patrolmen for political purposes, levying a contribution and defrauding it from the pay of the men, and keeping houses of prostitution as drinking places under the color powers granted to the Commissioners, and removes them from office.

SENATE....ALBANY, Thursday, Feb. 10.

Mr. MURPHY reported the bill providing for the completion of the Bedford-avenue improvement, Brooklyn.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

By Mr. CRAGIN—Amending the act incorporating the City Gas Light Company of the City of New-York.

By Mr. FRENCH—Fixing compensation of the Stenographer of the Supreme Court, Circuit Court, and Court of Over and Terminer of Kings County. The bill fixes the compensation at $4,000 per annum, and requires the stenographer to furnish an transcript of his notes gratuitously when required by law.

By Mr. CAULDWELL—Authorizing a plan for the sewerage and drainage of Yonkers.

By Mr. LOUIS—Authorizing the construction of the Lake Ontario Shore Railroad. The bill authorizes State aid to the amount of $[illegible] when rails have been laid from Oswego to Genesee River in Monroe County, and $[illegible] more when the road is completed to Lewiston.

APPOINTMENTS.

THE REGENCY AND POLICE COMMISSIONERSHIP.

The Senate having made nominations for Regent and Police Commissioner, Messrs. KERNAN and BOSWORTH were presented to the Assembly Chamber to complete the union.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIFTH-STREET RAILROAD.

The bill authorizing the construction of a railroad in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street, New-York, was passed.

THE SECRET LAW.

The Senate took up the special order, it being the bill to repeal the Metropolitan Excise law. The question was on the substitute moved by Mr. PORTER, making an excise law for the State, when a protracted debate ensued.

Mr. MURPHY moved an amendment providing that licensed places, except as provided in the bill, shall be kept closed on Sundays, on election days, and between the hours of 1 and 5 o'clock in the morning. After debate the amendment was adopted.

Mr. KENNEDY moved to strike out the provision requiring licenses to be granted by the President and Trustees of villages. Lost.

Mr. HUMBARD offered the following additional section, which was adopted:

SECTION 6. In no town or village shall the Commissioners of Excise exceed, by this act appoint a Clerk of the Board of Excise; the fee of Commissioner of Excise in towns or villages shall be the same per diem as allowed to them for their services per diem as town or village officers; the compensation arising from the sale of licenses in any town or village shall be deposited with the Board of Supervisors at their next annual meeting, for such purposes as the Board of such town; the book of minutes of such Commissioners of Excise in any town or village, except what is in the Clerk's office of such town or village, the expenses of printing necessary forms in any town or village, when such Commissioners of Excise in any town or village, in like manner as any other town or village charges.

Mr. SCOTT moved to strike out the words "no much of the last mentioned act as makes intoxication an offence, punishable by fine and imprisonment, is hereby abrogated and annulled." Lost, by 15 to 15, the Republicans in the affirmative.

Mr. SCOTT offered an amendment authorizing the submitting of the question of "license or no license" to the people of each county at the annual elections. If a majority of the people of any county vote against license, no license to sell intoxicating liquors shall be granted in said county.

The Committee then rose and reported progress, when the bill was made the special order for to-morrow.

Adjourned until to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock.

ASSEMBLY.

The Canal Board sent in a communication relative to what legislation is necessary to provide for any deficiency in the canal revenues; which was ordered to be printed.

They say no legislation is necessary to provide for any deficiency in the canal revenues to pay the canal debt and interest, which they say,

The Ice Question—Artificial Ice.

My attention has been called to an article in a recent number of your paper on the all-absorbing ice question. The continued mild weather, together with the advanced state of the season, make it almost certain that there will be, during the coming Summer, a great scarcity of that favorite commodity of the American people. The matter becomes, then, of the possible consequences upon the public health, that of vital importance. Now and then, during the past few years, reference has been made in the newspapers to the manufacture of artificial ice; yet it is known to but very few that this branch of industry has been quietly brought to such a state of perfection and economy as to admit of competition with natural ice even in the most favored latitudes. Several good ice machines have been patented in this country. We understand that parties who have closely investigated the subject and examined every machine in operation, here and abroad, announce unhesitatingly that ice can be made as it is now actually made in various European cities for about $6 per ton. We would, therefore, suggest to our ice companies, or other capitalists, the propriety of making, while it is yet time, such arrangements as will secure an cheap ice next Summer. J. M. L.

The Sale of Tickets at Niblo's Theatre.

There is something wrong connected with the sale of tickets at Niblo's which, I think, should be exposed. The sale for Mr. FECHTER'S Hamlet was advertised to commence this morning at 9 o'clock. Before the hour I was on hand, expecting, of course, to reap the fruits of early rising and promptitude in the procurement of the seats I desired. What was my surprise to learn, on the opening of the box office, that the choice seats—the front rows of the parquette circle, and many in the stall—were only to be obtained of an individual at No. 114 Broadway, which place had not been advertised in the TIMES as a place of sale.

On proceeding further I found that the price of these choice seats was twenty-five cents advance on the regular price. Thus the public are quietly handed over to be the prey of private speculators. If there must be speculation let the speculators stand the same chance as others at a fair sale of tickets at a stated time, but let us have no more of these bogus sales. The thing is aggravated by the fact that the price of seats at this theatre is already too high—higher, we believe, than at any other theatre.

FAIR PLAY.

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, Feb. 8, 1873.

Time to Act.

It was with mingled feelings of pleasure and regret I read your article of to-day on "Time to Act;" pleasure that you do not fear to notice the misdeeds of our officials, and regret that you do not point out a definite remedy. That our large cities are the worst governed and most corrupt in the world, and the inhabitants thereof are being most unmercifully robbed in the way of taxation, &c., from day to day, no person in his sober senses will deny; but where or what is the remedy?

Suppose some of our leading merchants pay a little more attention as to how the money goes out of their pockets, instead of giving all their attention to the means of putting it in—let them call a meeting and organize a "reform association"—having no regard to politics—subscribe a fund, and employ honest counsel to work against these officials with their own weapons, the law, and see, so to speak, technically against technicality, to the end that the corrupt "members of the political Ring" have justice meted out to them; and in case the judges, justices, &c., members of the same Ring, do not their duty honestly and faithfully, let them be impeached and be debarred from holding office evermore, if no other punishment be meted out to them. A merchant of this City told me that he would willingly pay $1,000 per annum to be assured that he would not have his goods stolen from him.

The honest element in our cities, without doubt, is largely in the majority, and when necessary can be relied on—witness the riots during the war; but there must be a leader in some shape, and I propose that the Reform Association take the place of this leader or Captain. That the sober, honest element in our large cities is in the majority was fully demonstrated in our election for Mayor some years ago between WOOD and TILMAN. It was a public boast that WOOD should be elected "in any case." At that time I wrote a communication to the newspapers, calling on the sober, honest citizens to awake from their lethargy, and praying them to come forward, do their duty and vote for an honest man. The result of the contest is well known. TILMAN was elected. Notwithstanding the thousands of fraudulent votes stuffed, it was said, in the ballot boxes after the polls had closed, they fell short of the mark, the honest element prevailing, as ever all. And now, once again, I pray that we may awake from our lethargy. The time for action is come, when honest men must look to their own, and see to it that the dishonest element be reduced in all events, if not entirely eradicated.

Merchants of New-York and Brooklyn, be up and doing! Stand by Reform Associations; let the names connected with them be such as to strike terror to the hearts of evil doers. Organize at once, and stop the flow to the ranks of the society of thieves and murderers. Appoint your counsel and others, let them work quietly, and affix the offenders sufficient evidence upon on these fiends from the Highest to the lowest, and the thunderbolt that will prove a lesson to evil-doers forever more. The Cost of Armories.

Will you inform an old subscriber where the Board of Supervisors got authority for renting armories at such enormous prices for our militia? I know of one regiment that never parades 200 man, whose armory, fitted up at the City's expense, will compare favorably with a Fifth-avenue parlor, and for which the City pays a yearly rent of some $20,000. This is by no means exceptional. TAXPAYER.

Two Bills at Albany—Protection to Human Beings and Animals.

SIR: Among the legion of laws and amendments to laws, introduced and to be introduced at Albany this Winter, probably no two will be found to meet and merit the warm and hearty approval of as large a majority of the people of this City as Mr. Assemblyman BURNS' amendment of the law "against cruelty to animals," and the humanitarian measure introduced by Mr. MITCHELL to protect the lives and comfort of passengers in our City railroad cars, when avaricious as thousands will readily attest who daily pay for the privilege of working their passage up and down at the straps of the Third-avenue cars.

"Man's inhumanity to man"—and horse,

"Makes countless thousands mourn"—and groan,

Mr. BURNS' amendment has the true ring, and strikes in the right direction. It holds the employer, or employers, liable to all the penalties for violation, &c., except in certain clearly defined cases. Mr. MITCHELL'S bill covers more ground, and goes directly to the core of the evil. It provides each passenger in every car with a railroad seat, to the number of twenty-five, not to exceed thirty, the maximum allowed to any street car. Such a law, if so framed as to forbid any but the conductor and driver to remain upon the platform, would not only give a salutary check to the murder, by inches, of the noble animals doomed to drag overloaded cars through sunshine and storm, but would more effectually break up the systematized gangs of thieves and pickpockets that infest our City cars—and to a fearful extent—than would the services of at least one thousand additional Patrolmen.

The good people of the City of New-York have endured their inhumanity to themselves and the poor helpless brutes quite long enough. Let a committee be made, let no day be lost, let our railroad gallery, in words and efforts that cannot be misunderstood, urge the forward movement. Let Messrs. BURNS and MITCHELL be encouraged and sustained in their laudable efforts by the approval of the people, as a public meeting, convened at the Cooper Institute or some other convenient point, under the auspices of the Society of which Mr. BERGH is President. Let this be followed by a continuous stream of petitions to the law-making powers at Albany in behalf of the measures that shall prove by its force and volume the determination of the people to be heard and respected, and they will be heard and respected. To facilitate the matter blank sheets, with requisite heading, should be left at all the Police Stations in the City, where the humane would call at their leisure and subscribe their names.

Very respectfully, ONE OF THE PEOPLE.

CURRENT NOTES.

Charlotte, N. C., lights its streets on Sundays and nights only.

The Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette seems to be devoting most of his time to reconnoitering in ancient history.

And now comes the Sacramento Union asserting that Tahoe means, not great water, but big water.

Worcester, Mass., is to have a new Democratic morning paper, to be called the Times. The first number will be issued March 7.

An advertisement in a Missouri paper induces the government into fall down state and cast his tooth where he can obtain them.

Davies County produces more tobacco than any other county in Kentucky. Its yield last year was 4,202,262 pounds.

Citizens of Columbia, S. C., on Sunday last, contributed $[illegible] to aid the wretched Cretans.

Dogs paid the State of Kentucky $2,109 55 for licenses last year, and killed 21,116 sheep, valued at $20,342.

It is not now fashionable to speak of old veterans. Old veterans are soldiers of the war of 1812; veterans are soldiers of the late rebellion.

A Cincinnati reporter announces that a certain "magnificent tobacco salad washtubs was inaugurated on Monday with much éclat, including a sale of forty-one hogsheads."

A correspondent of a New-Jersey paper says it was his "privilege" to witness a recent execution in Delaware. There is no accounting for tastes.

A farmer in Lewiston, Me., sells his wood by sample, leaving sticks at residences and offering to deliver wood like them at a specified price.

Some Canadian papers object to the proposed fractional currency on the ground that it would be inconvenient for those who cannot read.

The Rhode Island House on Tuesday defeated by five majority a bill to authorize the intermarriage of whites and negroes. It had passed the Senate.

Toledo has four tobacco manufactories and Cincinnati has forty-four. Toledo last year manufactured 2,302,[illegible] pounds and Cincinnati 2,687,945 pounds.

A North Carolina paper makes a point unintentionally when it says there is an old adage which runneth: "Save at the picket and waste at the bung."

Indiana reports that J. W. WHITNEY, a blacksmith, who had his leg broken by a kick from his horse on Saturday, set it himself and then rode home, a distance of forty miles, alone.

The trustees of the Illinois Insane Asylum have accepted the resignation of Dr. MCFARLAND, its Superintendent, to take effect when his successor is appointed.

A Delaware paper reports that a farmer in that State met with a serious loss while absent from home on Tuesday evening. His house took fire, and on his return he found "everything burned but a little meat."

Vice-President TORRANCE of the New-York Central, who has resigned, has addressed a letter to the officers and employes of the road, thanking them for the admirable cooperation they have given him in the performance of his duties.

The Hartford and New-Haven Railroad Company have a locomotive watch, during the past twelve and a half months has run upwards of 40,000 miles without the loss of a single trip, and without a five minutes' detention at any time, and has never needed repair.

The St. Joseph (Mo.) Union of Friday last files one column with an article headed "Murder at Midnight; a Man Shot Dead;" the next with an article on "The Capture of the Bay Murderers," and the next with an article on "The Nashville Murder."

It is written of a Southern poet that he is in no sense a Burns, a Deposit, a Bigor or a Berchet, and that he is as nearly as possible the antipodal of Hudibras, Butler, Korsun, Scarron, and that style of thinkers. The man who writes it is as nearly as possible the antipodal of Solomon and that style of thinkers.

Students of Dickinson College have organized a Boat Club, have purchased the fast-sailing barge Mystic, and hope after sufficient practice to be able to compete in the race with many of the leading Clubs of the country, so says a Pennsylvania paper, but it does not further explain what is to be their style of boating.

San Francisco merchants organized last week the California Association for the restoration of American shipping interests, and also adopted resolutions declaring that they indorsed the sentiments expressed in the document received from New-York through the courtesy of Mr. W. H. WEBB.

Chicago papers contain advertisements of two articles having identically the same name, one of which is declared to be excellent for cleaning windows, marble and tinware, and the other as positively guaranteed "a new and delicious cream caramel, of different and genuine fruit flavors together." If, consequently, mistakes happen in families, who shall bear the blame?

The Chicago Tribune thinks while there is no disputing the fact that the present price of wheat is ruinously low for the farmer there is still much reason to doubt whether a rise can be expected very soon, and that the only prospect of a considerable advance is to be looked for in the direction of a decrease in the breadth planted.

A member of the Alabama House of Representatives, whose seat is contested, on the 1st inst. sent the Speaker a letter in which he said: "To-morrow I am to be married, and on Saturday I take the boat for Mobile, thence to Montgomery. I think it but fair, under the unusual circumstances, that I should be given time to appear before the body to make my defence. Any indecent haste on the part of the Legislature would not be creditable."

Three men visited the Potter's Field in Chicago a few nights ago and quietly eat their lunch while resurrecting a body. They were discovered as they were departing, one of them bearing the "dead subject" in a bag on his shoulder, and were pursued by six men, but they turned upon their pursuers, fired upon them, wounding two, and then dropped their prize, ran and escaped.

JACOB THOMPSON, of Mississippi, has addressed, through the Press, a letter to the Bar of Cincinnati in which he complains that Judge WILLIAM JOHNSON, of that city, was unjust to him in his eulogy before them of the late ex-Secretary SEWARD, and testifies to his own consciousness of the integrity and fidelity with which he discharged every duty while in the service of the United States. He denies that he was in any way responsible for the destruction of the Indian bonds, and says he has been slandered on this account long enough.

Wisconsin sends us another dog story. The owner of the dog got drunk and lay down on the railroad track to sleep. With none but the dog to keep him company. The whistle of an approaching train shrieked in the startled ear of night; the faithful dog tugged at his master's clothes and tore them in his efforts to awaken him. His efforts proved in vain, and the dog took the mangled shoulder and fairly dragged him from the track just as the train came along. The man was saved, but the poor faithful dog was struck by the cowcatcher and killed. His grateful owner, when he awoke from his stupor, gathered up the pieces and reverently buried them.

Lake Tahoe is a sheet of fresh water of wondrous purity, lying in a deep basin among the Sierra Nevada Mountains, twenty miles long from north to south, and varying in width from eight to ten miles. Completely surrounded by lofty mountains, some of whose peaks are covered with snow, it lies like a jewel set in silver, reflecting in its crystal depths the surrounding scenery with exquisite fidelity. Its waters are of great coldness, and it is said never freeze, attributable, perhaps, to its depth, which averages about 1,000 feet. The extreme depth, so far as known, is 1,500 feet. The State of Nevada owns one-half of it, and is determined to call its portion Tahoe, whether California pleases Bigler or not.

CRUELTIES AT SEA.

JAMES BRADY, RICHARD BOND, WILLIAM CARPER and JACOB MYERS, four of the seamen on the ship Neptune, who alleged that they were cruelly beaten by Captain PRENDOY and his two mates, BRADY and MORAN, on the late passage from Liverpool, are now lying in the Long Island Hospital, corner of Henry and Pacific streets, Brooklyn, suffering from the effects of the injuries they received. All the men are in a low condition, but BRADY'S case is considered critical. Having received many blows on the back part of his head, and being attended no medical attention, the sores have become putrid, and his recovery is considered doubtful. The other men are of their treatment, and some of them are so sick that their will probably also have to be taken to the hospital.

In addition to the statements made by the eight seamen, which were published on Wednesday morning, MICHAEL McDONNEAN, WILLIAM JOYCE, each of whom alleges that he sustained injuries similar to those before detailed, at the hands of the officers of the Neptune, have come forward and added their testimony.

In corroboration of the first statements published in the TIMES yesterday, an affidavit was made yesterday, signed by ARTHUR SAWYERS, SAMUEL WITHERS, WM. JOSUA and SAMUEL BROWN.

On the 26th of May, 1869, Captain PRENDOY was arrested while in this port and arraigned before United States Commissioner BARNES, on complaint of Mate MORAN, one of the seamen who charged PRENDOY with that time assaulting the Neptune, with assaulting him with an iron belaying pin, with intent to kill him, while on the high seas. The Captain gave $1,000 bail for examination on June 2. On that day the complainant, for some cause, did not appear, and the Commissioner was forced to dismiss the case.

On Jan. 11, 1866, Captain PRENDOY, then commanding the same ship, was before United States Commissioner STILWELL for examination on a similar charge made by AMOS RICHARDS, another seaman.

In this case Captain PRENDOY succeeded in obtaining his discharge, but for what reason Commissioner STILWELL cannot now remember.

United States Commissioners BARNES and STILWELL say that Captain PRENDOY has been before United States Commissioners several times on similar charges.

Miss ELIZABETH PURDAY, a very respectable appearing lady, who resides with her husband in Seventh-street, one door from Central-avenue, Hunter's Point, and who, with her husband, was a passenger on the ship Neptune, from Liverpool, in the Fall of 1868, having seen and read of the cruelties alleged to have been practiced by Captain PRENDOY and his mates, came over to the office of Mr. GEORGE H. SHIRE, the counsel for the seamen, and exhibited the original manuscript copy of an address drawn up by her fellow-passengers relating to alleged cruelties committed on board the Neptune during the voyage. The address is as follows:

As a warning to all overbearing officers, we, the undersigned, think it our duty to give the following imperfect narrative of the treatment we received on board of the above ship, as it would be impossible to describe the cruelty that was daily—nay, hourly—inflicted on us, commencing at Liverpool and ending at our arrival in New-York. We were beaten by a gang of ruffians, and broken up by the treatment we received, which we have to thank Captain Prendoy for. We were continually insulted together with persons of our own sex, and were made to remain the two days the ship was aground, without anything to eat, in the space allotted for five. The berth occupied by so many persons was thrown in sight of the public, and was taken on deck by the mate and detained there for a length of time that tender. Upwards of a hundred were thus insulted during the voyage, for using the ship's water, which was contrary to the rules made known whereby we might regulate our conduct. Immediately was we ashore, after our journey, if complaint by any of the boys (meaning the men) was made to the mate, he would say, "Go to the bitch, you get nothing to do with me; go to your cabin." Upon the deck, in the middle watch, on the night of the 24th of May, 1868, the mate, Thomas Moran, called out to us, "Get up, you bastards, I want you out of your cabins." We were then ordered to the forward part of the ship, where we were kept for the space of two hours, in the rain, without any shelter, while our cabins were searched, and our boxes, &c., thrown on deck. Upon our return we found our cabins in a state of confusion, our boxes, &c., broken, and our clothes, &c., thrown about the floor. We were then ordered to our berths, and were locked in, and left in the dark, without any light, and were not allowed to go out, even to the water closet, on the mate, Thomas Moran, being on deck. We were then ordered to our allowance of provisions and water. They served us with provisions on the 27th August, and for days giving us none, after the first meal, they served us with vinegar, and all the sugar we have served out, which was taken from the ship's stores, by the sailors, was a great evil. These are weights that should weigh, they were served short, and the water they were served with was the dregs of the casks, which made us sick, and was the cause of the sickness of our children, which proved fatal to many. When it was complained that they were without food, they were insultingly told, "Go to the galley and get some food." Young as we were, we were given to understand that we were to pay our own way, and we would give them trouble, when they want to prove that we were passengers. We were compelled to do duty, as children, by the mate, Thomas Moran, all during the voyage, and were compelled to do duty as men

EUROPE.

The excitement in Paris continues. The demonstrations are limited to the collecting of crowds in the streets, which the Police disperse, arresting the turbulent individuals. Armed bodies of police patrol the streets, and the vicilance of the authorities is unabated. A ball announced for Wednesday at the Tuileries, was postponed on account of the disorders....In Corps Legislatif, an "interpellation" regarding missing documents from the Government archives, caused a debate, which ended in the President silencing one of the speakers....A journal called La Rivière has been seized, and its editor arrested....The reported appointment of M. PREVOST PARADOL as next French Minister to Washington is contradicted.....A bill to pay the interest on British Consols quarterly is in preparation....The Viceroy of Egypt first sent the bell for his ironclads to the Sultan, without the vessels, but afterwards concluded to send them, withholding the rifles made for him in Europe ....Petitions in favor of the proposed dogma of infallibility from Gallican clergy are said to indage the Ecumenical Council.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, Mr. SCHURZ introduced a joint resolution in regard to the distribution of public lands among agricultural colleges. A bill reorganizing the Marine Hospital service was reported. The bill for supplying the Naval Schooners by transferring $3,000,000 of the appropriations was passed after some debate. Mr. SCOTT made a long speech in refutation of the statistics given by Commissioner WELLS in his report on the subject of manufacturing pig iron. The bill for the admission of Mississippi was taken up, and a long debate ensued upon the amendment striking out the preamble and all conditions, during which, Mr. STEWART, of Nevada, criticised Mr. SUMNER, and the latter replied, repeating his charges against Mr. TRUMBULL, which drew out a caustic answer from the latter gentleman. No action was taken on the question under discussion, and at a late hour the Senate adjourned.

In the House, on motion of Mr. BANKS, Mr. JOHN KITTS, an old soldier of the Revolution, born in 1763, was granted the privileges of the floor for the day. A bill was introduced for the encouragement of a mail steamship line to India and China. A resolution of Mr. WOOD directing that an appropriation be made to refund the City of New-York $1,000,000 expended in 1861 by the Union Defence Committee, was objected to. The resolution reported some time since on the subject of Americans imprisoned in England for political offences was discussed at some length, but nothing was done with it. A debate also took place on the amendment to the Appropriation bill to keep up the Capitol Police force as at present organized. Mr. DAWES made the closing speech, and the reduction was sustained, the amendment being rejected. The House then, in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to discuss the legislative appropriations. A motion to reduce the mileage of members $500,000 occasioned a long debate, and was finally rejected. Some further debate on other points in the bill, and a purely personal discussion between Messrs. COX and BUTLER, which occasioned some disorder, followed, and, at 4:30 P. M., the Committee rose, and the House adjourned.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

In the Senate yesterday the bill providing for the completion of the Bedford-avenue, Brooklyn, improvement was reported. A bill to amend the charter of the Stuyvesant Safe Deposit Company of New-York was introduced. ANDREW ROWAN was appointed stenographer to the Senate. The One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street Railroad bill was passed. The bill to amend the Metropolitan Excise law was taken up and a long debate followed, at the close of which the bill was made a special order for to-day.

In the Assembly the Canal Board submitted a communication, setting forth that no legislation is necessary to provide for any deficiency in the canal revenues to pay the canal debt and interest thereon. The bill to abolish the contract system of hiring State Prison labor was called to a third reading. Mr. KIERNAN and Judge Hoxworth were elected Regent of the University and Commissioner of Metropolitan Police, respectively. A bill was reported regulating the Brooklyn Ferry Company to run boats at night; also one, abolishing the New-York Real Estate Association and the Young Men's Christian Association of New-York. The House took a recess until 7 o'clock, when the general orders were taken up and the third reading reached on a large number of bills.

GENERAL.

At a mass meeting at Fort Garry, Red River, Jan. 21, letters from Governor-General YOUNG and the British Secretary of the Colonies, were read, assuring the inhabitants of protection to the different religious persuasions; a guard over tithes to property of every kind; the continuation of all existing franchises, and the granting of all others they may be fit to exercise.

The drawback fraud operation, CALDWELL, was brought before a Police Magistrate in Toronto, and would have been committed for extradition, but was granted a postponement until Saturday owing to the absence of his counsel.

The Shawmut Flouring Mill, Rochester, N. Y., was burned yesterday morning. Loss $65,000; partially insured.

A Woman's Suffrage Convention was held yesterday at Columbus, Ohio.

The political contest in New-Hampshire grows hot. A secret organization, known as the "Labor League," has been formed, it is said, as an offset to the labor reform movement.

The Forest River Lead Works at Salem, Mass., were seized on Wednesday for alleged violation of the Revenue laws.

A Portland telegram says Captain COMSTOCK has been granted permission to take the Monarch to Annapolis, and may touch at New-York en route. A Washington dispatch confirms the first part of the story, and another denies it.

Governor GRANT has vetoed the Philadelphia Metropolitan Police bill.

The Niagara Frontier Police Commissioners have been removed from office by Governor HOFFMAN for various forms of alleged malfeasance in office.

A new suit has been commenced in the Supreme Court of this district by JAMES FISK, Jr., as plaintiff, against the Albany and Susquehanna Railroad Company, JOSEPH H. RAMSEY, the President, and twenty-nine others, in which the Court is asked to restrain the transfer upon the books of the Company of a large number of the shares now held by certain of the defendants. The defendants not being ready when the motion was called on yesterday before Judge INGRAHAM, the argument was postponed for one week.

The second annual meeting of the Evangelical Alliance of America was held yesterday, at the Hall of the Young Men's Christian Association. The officers for the year were elected, and the importance of the great conference to be held in this City next September, was discussed by Rev. Drs. MCCOSH, CUMMINGS, SCHERCK and others.

The Opera Ball held at the Academy of Music last evening, was attended by a large and distinguished company, and was a brilliant affair.

EDWARD A. BRASELY, an accessory of WILLIAM F. HOWE in the well-known forgeries upon the Williamsburg City Bank, Long Island Bank and National Park Bank, to the amount of $6,000, was yesterday sentenced by Judge TROY to imprisonment in the Penitentiary for four years, eleven months and twenty-nine days.

The representatives of the life insurance and trust companies met yesterday, in furtherance of the petition to have the legislative investigation into the companies' affairs carried on openly.

The Tariff.

The fact that the House of Representatives, judged by recent votes, is more liberal than the Ways and Means Committee, is not a reason for assuming that the new Tariff bill, monstrous as it is, will fail as a matter of course. There are the strongest possible reasons why it should fail. Considered with reference either to the requirements of industry, the real interests of trade, or the all but unanimous demand of the people for relief from taxation, it is a measure which the House might without impropriety summarily vote down. As it stands, it is an insult to the popular intelligence as well as an invasion of the popular pocket. The few concessions it does make become insignificant compared with the attempt still further to aggrandize the iron and steel manufacturers, and to maintain high duties on manufactured articles while abolishing the duties on raw materials which enter into their production. In other respects—for example, its hocus pocus in the altered classification of duties on iron—we cannot misinterpret the influences which were at work in the preparation of the scheme or the ends it is intended to promote. These are so apparent, that under favorable circumstances its defeat might be calculated upon with tolerable certainty.

Much depends, however, on the discretion manifested in the management of the varied forces which are hostile to monopoly. The danger is, that under the pretence of fighting monopoly the free traders will parade their issue as the only alternative. We have seen something of this danger within the last few days, in connection with an effort to commit the House to a revenue tariff, pure and simple. The narrow majority by which the resolution was rejected has been adduced as evidence of the fate that awaits the Tariff bill. But, in truth, as between rational protection and extreme free trade there can be no doubt of the decision to be pronounced in a full House. Free trade, thus tested, would be found weaker even than monopoly. Indeed, the only practical effect of free trade demonstrations will be to frustrate tariff reform and to strengthen the chance of enacting the new bill with all its abominations.

What seems to be wanted is some well-considered and concerted action, with the view of narrowing the contest to a fair fight between the champions of monopoly and the advocates of a reformed, but not a free trade tariff. Mere opposition to the new bill will accomplish comparatively little. To render opposition usefully effective it should assume the shape of another bill,—not by the Committee of Ways and Means. Mr. WELLS' reports have demonstrated the feasibility of simplifying the tariff and greatly reducing its burdens without loss to the revenue or detriment to the great industries which we are bound incidentally to protect. Few who have studied the subject doubt that it is possible to combine this, the only defensible kind of protection, with the fullest regard for the Treasury. Why should not this aspect of the case be presented in the form of a bill, which, while contrasting favorably with the present tariff and the tariff proposed by Mr. SCHENCK, shall combine justice to the Government and the manufacturers, with fair dealing towards the people? By no other method is it probable that the Republicans who oppose monopoly can be united against the movement of its supporters. If, after all, the free traders withhold their help from reform because it is not precisely their reform, their responsibility for the continuance of monopoly will be manifest to the country. Let us have another Tariff bill, then, constructed in the joint interests of the Treasury, the taxpayers and American industry.

Connecticut and the President.

Whatever may be the sentiments of adverse cliques, the great body of the people, are as cordially disposed as ever towards President GRANT, and retain an unlimited faith in his willingness and ability to carry on the affairs of the nation in such a way as to promote the "greatest good of the greatest number." The occasional calumnies of the President's opponents only attract the attention of a very limited circle. The people at large never heed them, but judge the Government according to its acts, and without the slightest reference to the representations of its enemies. While the Democrats are eagerly pursuing that ignis fatuus of "a great reaction," and while a few reactionary politicians are fancying they discern the signs of a waning popularity, the President adheres to the simple plan of doing his duty faithfully towards all, without seeking to gain credit for it on the one hand, or to silence the voice of detraction on the other. The Republican Party has every reason to be satisfied with his general course, and while General GRANT has gone too far to please some, and not far enough to please others, it is quite certain that he has won the approval of the larger part of his supporters and of the nation.

When State Conventions speak out, as they do every now and then, we obtain a sure evidence of this condition of feeling. Partisans may make a clamor on one side or the other, but the decision of a State Convention is entitled to be taken as a sign of the times. The Republican Convention of Connecticut has just delivered its verdict upon the Government. It is not expressed with any uncertainty. The experience of a year has confirmed the confidence in the "integrity, ability, and patriotism of General GRANT." It has watched the President's work, and is quite satisfied with its progress. The great fact that the debt has been reduced over eighty millions since March 1, 1869, is alone sufficient to attest his anxiety to bring the financial affairs of the nation into a manageable form.

It would be a marvelous Government which escaped all adverse criticism, and when General GRANT took office we do not suppose that he anticipated more generous treatment than most men in high positions receive. He has been assailed with some vehemence by a small knot of opponents, but even they are unable to accuse him of any act which is calculated to prove injurious to any interests of the nation. Some people say that he ought to have recognized Cuba. It may fairly be contended that these critics have never properly weighed the consequences of the measure which they recommend. No one supposes that the President would not be very glad to assist the cause of Cuban independence if that could be done consistently with our good faith and honor as a nation. Perhaps the means of accomplishing the end may yet arise, but down to the present time the Government has been quite powerless in the matter. On any other detail of his policy there is not even a minority worth mentioning against the President—except, of course, the party which is naturally opposed to him. It is as obvious as ever it was that he has no other ambition than to execute the will of the people. With greater economy in the Administration, his hold upon public confidence must become stronger every day. There can be no question that we may safely anticipate this active and vigorous retrenchment. "In both national and State administrations," the Republicans of Connecticut say, "we call for a continuance of strict economy in all branches, the rejection of all appropriations or loans of credit for enterprises outside of the indispensable machinery of government." In this declaration we hear an echo of the voice of the whole nation. Since the subject was first discussed, the Government has done much to satisfy the demand made upon it, and the estimates will probably never be so high again under President GRANT as they unavoidably were this year. With the substantial results of a wise and temperate policy before us, we can well afford to put aside, as unworthy of notice, the small cavils which are raised against the Government by those who are determined to find fault, no matter what may be done or left undone.

Our Wharves and Piers.

A fortnight since we gave a synopsis of Mr. KIERNAN's bill for the water-front improvement of this City, and briefly contrasted it with the Citizens' Association bill introduced into the Legislature for the same purpose twelve months ago. Stated broadly, the difference between these two bills is that, while aiming at the same end, the former apparently seeks to use the great scheme for political patronage, the latter simply for civic benefit. A correspondent once half-satirically proposed, in the columns of the TIMES, that some of the people who were trying to get railroad franchises for nothing should "turn their attention to that broader and no less profitable field, the construction of docks for this City;" and he expressed the belief that so pressing was the latter necessity that "the public, to secure what they want, will consent to a little judicious and temperate swindling."

We do not know, and cannot know until the bill has received all its eleventh-hour amendments, whether this hint has been acted upon; but it looks now as if the suggestion had fallen among pupils who will "better the instruction." Last year's bill gave the charge of this vast enterprise to a Board of Wharves and Piers, consisting of thirteen gentlemen. Of these, ten were named in the bill, and were all well-known citizens of established reputation for probity and honor; the other three were to be the Mayors of the Cities of New-York and Brooklyn, (for the two safest way to form the harbor district for this purpose,) and the Comptroller of New-York. The new bill confers its great powers upon five Commissioners, whom it does not name, and whom the Mayor of New-York is to appoint. This difference, of course, is fundamental.

In the next place, the act of last year provided that the members of the Board, except the President, should "serve without compensation." Mr. KIERNAN's bill proposes that the members shall "receive an annual compensation," and does not even limit the amount, but leaves it "to be fixed by the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund." Again, last year's bill, while conferring plenary powers regarding public wharves and piers, and moderate powers regarding the direction of repairs upon private wharves, was not authorized to expend money in buying the latter. But the Tammany bill authorizes the Board to buy "any and all wharf property in the City," and any "privileges pertaining to any such wharf property" not owned now by the Corporation. When we add that the rules for acquisition and payment of private property for public streets are to be applied in these new purchases, we shall see how Tammany patronage is thereby augmented.

Again, as to wharfage leasing, the new Commission is authorized to "appropriate any wharves, piers, bulkheads, docks, or slips to the sole use of special kinds of commerce;" but whereas the Citizens' scheme limited the renewal of all leases to an aggregate leasehold of thirty years, the new scheme increases this to fifty years. So, again, the former bill expressly prohibited the Board from altering the present rates of wharfage on canal boats—a restriction we do not discover in the new. For so vast a scheme, not only of repair but of purchase, not only of new construction but of general territorial acquisition, a long purse is needed. And, accordingly, the Comptroller is to issue bonds for this purpose, the interest at seven per cent to be paid in taxes, to the extent of "not more than $2,000,000 in any one year."

It will be seen, therefore, from this summary of the proposed measure, how vast and comprehensive, and costly a project is in preparation. We do not seriously object, however, to the magnitude or thoroughness of the scheme, though it evidently might be made less extended in scope. All that we ask is, that the enterprise shall not turn into a gigantic "job,"—a new Tammany tag,—but shall be put under the control of public-spirited citizens of approved integrity. The necessity in the case is amply admitted. Our wharves and piers are a disgrace to the City. Were economy alone in question, the waste of room, the want of system, the bad material, requiring millions of money to be expended every year to patch up rotten timbers and broken planks, the danger of fire, the perils to merchandise from thieves or from storms—would justify a thorough reconstruction of our entire water front. What we desire is, that the remedy to be applied shall be purely a public enterprise, and not a partisan scheme.

The Submarine Cable to Asia.

The Committee on Commerce has reported without amendment the bill to encourage telegraphic communication between the Eastern and Western Hemispheres, or, in other words, the Pacific Cable bill. The project itself is an old one, antedating the purchase of Alaska, and indeed begun, we believe, before the first Atlantic cable was laid. In its original shape, however, it relied more on the land route than at present. In those earlier days of submarine telegraphy, the chances of failure in long ocean lines, and the losses which failure involved, induced engineers to plan the shortest possible submarine routes, no matter what additional and costly land connections might have to be added. The tempting proximity of the Northwestern corner of this Continent to the Northeastern corner of Asia was therefore one of the chief inducements for an experiment in that region, and expensive explorations have been made for a line of telegraph to run along the coast through Washington Territory, British Columbia, and a part of Russian America, and thence across to Siberia, and again down the opposite Pacific shore.

All this is changed now. The ocean is perhaps the cheaper route. No Pacific "telegraph plateau," we believe, has been mapped out with the accuracy claimed for the similar Atlantic bed; and, in a new ocean, with unknown elements entering into the problem, there will still be something doubtful and experimental in the task. But, on the other hand, that old element of uncertainty as to whether any telegraphic wire could be successfully worked when submerged hundreds or thousands of miles and exposed to ocean currents and to chemical and mechanical changes, has long since been removed. We find, therefore, that though a long line of telegraph was originally projected, and partly built, through British Columbia, this forms no part of the new enterprise.

The bill reported by Mr. CONKLING provides that the starting point for the cable shall be south of Cape San Juan, in Washington Territory. The line which the American and Asiatic Telegraph Company originally estimated, and to which substantially, we presume, they still adhere, was about 5,000 miles long. But the islands of the Pacific offer a great advantage in breaking this long line; and in this respect the enterprise is less hazardous, so far as the establishment of the line is concerned, than its Atlantic predecessor. The distance from San Francisco to Cape San Juan, in Washington Territory, is 700 miles, and this part of the line is already built. There begins the ocean cable proper, which, proceeding northwesterly, finds its first station at Sitka, a distance of 626 miles. Thence proceeding due west 500 miles, it touches Kodiak, where we have, or lately had, a military post. Thence, stretching southwesterly along the Alaska peninsula and the Aleutian group of islands 400 miles, it touches Oonalaska. From that point it leaves American islands behind, and 600 miles to the west, reaches the Island of Attoo, and with one miles more, Urup, the latter on the Asiatic shore. Another stretch of 300 miles carries it to Hakodadi, in Japan, where its mission proper as an ocean cable may be said to end. But, with a northerly move of 200 miles, it reaches Possevet, where, on the mainland of Asia, it will connect with a branch, partly built, on that great Russian overland route which continues to the mouth of the Amoor River. From Possevet a southerly bound of 600 miles (also submarine) carries the cable to Nagasaki, whence its easterly branch may continue 600 miles to Yokohama, and a westerly one of 400 to Shanghai, the latter to connect with the East India Telegraph Company's line, so encircling the globe.

These were the stations, we say, and these the distances estimated a year or more ago, and if they have been, as shall be slightly changed, it can only be in the way of improvement. Even as they are, it is clear that no distance between adjacent points in the long line is greater than seven hundred miles, which is a trifle in ocean telegraphy. And again, it is clear that the strict transPacific course—say from San Juan to Hakodadi, is only 3,150 miles in length, while that from Sitka to Japan is only 2,400. It is evident that the project is perfectly practicable and that it need not be long before we have daily news here in New-York from Japan and China, as we have it now from England and California.

The Cuban and and the Congressional Appointments.

A glorious national feeling always comes with the census. We come to every decade with a sense of certainty in our gains. We know that we were not much more than 5,000,000 at the beginning of the century; that we crossed its meridian with 23,000,000, and that we entered the great war with 31,000,000! We presume we have 40,000,000 now,—notwithstanding the war,—and we are in hopes we shall have a 100,000,000 in 1900, even if we have to whip all mankind in the meantime. What we would have been without the war,—if we had diligently continued in husbandry and spinning,—we are afraid to conjecture. And yet, perhaps, not so much more! These war-evils are illusory in many respects. Look at Prussia after FREDERICK was over with his mighty struggle. It was strong enough to cope with NAPOLEON. Look at France after the Revolution, when it seemed as if every able-bodied citizen had been beheaded. NAPOLEON marched it over Europe and conquered. England came out of her Bonaparte wars stronger than ever, with all their burdens. And although when we proceed to count our possessions in 1870, we shall find a little falling off in cotton, sugars and shipping,—and perhaps in Southern products, in the total it will all be made up in hay, and wool and iron, and gold, and pork. And as for men and women, we probably have as many as if we had no war; for that struggle of ours was what the showmen would call an "unparalleled attraction," and the way the sons of other lands came troping here has been a marvel.

Twenty years ago, when we proudly figured up our 23,000,000, and found that we were rapidly nearing the population of France and the British Islands, our foreign friends had only one ocean to cross. California was an uncertain land! We had scarcely thought of the trade of Asia, and never dreamed of an Asiatic emigration. Well, here it comes, and the affrightened Orient empties her crowded cities upon our shores. Over the Atlantic comes the irrepressible, bouncing, thriftless Dermot,—himself a sore problem,—mainly distinctive in Police Courts, and so much a vexation, that we flew into a passion and went into secret lodges, and vowed that he should be kept out of our inheritance with his rollicksome and aggressive ways. It was only a whimsy, for when we came to measure poor Dermot, and see what there was of him, and remember that we had railways to build and much hard digging, and that this excitable stranger was fully capable of such performances with all his faults' we got over our passion, and bade Dermot work and grow and flourish! Now comes John Chinaman—patient, immutable, with calm sphinx-like mien,—so patient, so calm, so thrifty, no burdens too large, no indignity too harsh, no persecution too severe,—ever drifting, drifting, drifting in a steady, ceaseless, absorbing tide, over ocean and mountain and plain, until he stands before us in this great New-York City, and tells us that he is the first of a race that numbers a great part of the people of the world! Why poor Dermot, multiplied into all his shapes, was only 8,000,000,—not enough to crowd the State of Virginia. All Germany might have been put into the South,—with room enough for Italy, and France and Spain, —and the South would not have reached the measure of her capacity. There was an end to Dermot and Hans, and Guiseppe and Johnny Crapaud, even if we depopulated their fair dominions, but this John comes from a race that seems to be as countless as the sands of the sea-shore. What we are to do with him we do not know. That is not the purpose of this article. It would not amaze us, however, that with the impulse his coming has taught, we shall find the expected hundred millions with which we hope to begin business in 1901, swollen into one hundred and fifty.

We have to be drawn from the discussion thus opening, but the immediate question in the view of this Census is,—what shall we do with our representation in Congress? Upon our present basis, the power will not be long in passing to the West. When it was first ordained that Congressmen should be, we had one member for 30,000 people. In 1810, we made the number 35,000; in 1820, 40,000; in 1840, 70,680; in 1850, 93,423, until we reached the present ratio, which is 130,582. We have also increased our Representatives. In the beginning we had 105 members. In 1830 we had 240, which was reduced to 223 in 1840, only to be increased to 234 in 1850, our number to-day, although we have almost twice as many people. The Parliament of England is more than twice as large in the Commons alone, with the Lords four times as large, and it would not surprise us to see that number increased by adding life Peers to the House of Lords. The question of increasing the number of Congressmen is very important. Some thinkers argue that a large body of representatives will prevent corruption, because it is more difficult to buy a thousand than five hundred. If this being strictly logical, then we could end corruption altogether by advancing our Congressmen to some large number, say fifty thousand.

Such a crowd would be above the generous ambition even of Mr. FISK and Mr. GOULD, but what would become of legislation? The power of a corrupt Congress at the best is limited,—for there are few things that the most venal Congress could sell. There was scarcely a worse Parliament than that which gave England habeas corpus, and we don't think we ever had a worse Congress, with the war-jobbery of its members, than that which confirmed Emancipation. What we want is a body thoroughly representative and efficient. We want a House that is truly a House of the People,—not of certain classes of people. And at the same time we want a House that will work. Now if we elect members upon the basis of 194 into 30,000,000 we practically disfranchise one-half, or one-third, of the country. The districts become so large that no one member can thoroughly represent them,—and upon the poll, in any close contest, the vote of the defeated candidates could aggregate more than the whole representation under a census like that of 1860 or 1870. In arranging the apportionment of the Western States, the fractions over would probably take from many of them a good share of their representation.

We owe something to New-England and the Middle States! The people may dwell in the West, but here is the seat of commerce and money. Draw a line around a circumference of forty miles from the City Hall and it will include more people than live in any State except Ohio, Pennsylvania and Illinois. New-England represents more than mere citizenship. Under the present ratio New-England would lose six Representatives, New-York four, Pennsylvania three! Even Ohio would lose one, and the gain would fall upon the upper Mississippi states and California. South Carolina would gain a vote by adding her negroes to her suffrage, and the same result would probably be seen in Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama and Texas. We do not think it wise to sacrifice interests as important as those in New-England and the Middle States. We very much question whether it is wise to make large constituencies for the Representatives. We can imagine a Congress so large that it would be unwieldy,—some mob of Polish nobles, for instance, but another hundred members would do no harm. The West would be fully represented. There would be gains to the Southern States, and the interests of New-England and the Middle States, under any event dominant in the nation, by reason of money and ships and manufactures, would remain intact.

The whole question is full of interest, and should be patiently considered. Let it be debated without sectional feeling. What we want is a true Congress,—a body thoroughly representative,—in which we shall see East and West and North and South.

A correspondent sends us some particulars of a negotiation, of which he declares he was cognizant, for the sale of a West Point cadetship for $6,000—the usual price, as he was informed, being $2,000. He represents the practice as common, and cites the words of a Major-General, who, when asked what influence would be required to procure the position for the son of our correspondent, answered, "Buy it." From another quarter we hear, though with less minuteness, of the payment of $2,000 for a cadetship. Now, why don't our informants, instead of sending us letters for publication, the terms of which are almost necessarily vague, address themselves direct to the House Military Committee—furnishing to that body specific statements of fact, with names, dates, and other points essential to a satisfactory investigation? How is it that so many who write dogmatically to newspapers shrink from the test afforded by the House Committee?

Every change in the order of things suggests more changes; and the certainty of the change to be made at Hell Gate, attracts the eye of speculation to the site of the Navy Yard establishment at Brooklyn which General SICOCUM would remove by a vote in Congress. He thinks the yard may be better placed elsewhere and argues that the removal would be no charge to the Government, as the sale of the present ground would cover all expenses. No doubt, in any increase of commerce and shipbuilding, the Right would give great accommodation for wharfs and dock yards; and probably this proposition may be called "the beginning of the end." The Sound will yet be a greater Bosphorus, and Williamsburg, long in a corner, be astonished to find itself "in the force and road of casualty"—in the very highway of activity and progress.

Judge GERARD said, in uncovering the "Brady testimonial," that the Press had always been the friend of the Bar. "May the Press and the Bar," he continued, "ever be the two strong conservative pillars which shall support the fabric of this Government." By all means, at some future time—only what has the Press done that it should now be associated with a Bar such as that of New-York is said to be by its own members? Honest lawyers there still are, and we hope many of them—but how is it we hear of them so little, and of the other sort so very often?

The few lines which have appeared in the papers relative to the books of the Erie Company deserve the notice of foreign shareholders. These books were suddenly opened for the transfer of stocks, and as suddenly closed. No one pretends to be able to explain why this was done, but it is supposed that the object was to catch the said foreign shareholders. FISK and GOULD together are sure to succeed—tigers always does triumph over the other critters. The English agent comes out to get focus, but he will return shock. We should like to see a match for the Erie "Princes," even from England—but when nature made them it broke the mould they were cast in.

It may be true, as the cable telegram alleges, that the Pope is delayed with petitions from the Gallican clergy requesting him to promulgate the dogma of the infallibility. But if so, their course is in direct opposition to the policy of the most influential of their Bishops. Monseigneurs of Paris and of Orleans have been notably among the foremost in opposition to the contemplated dogma; it is fact, the term Gallican has been hitherto understood to apply only to that section of the Church which maintained the Episcopal power against the increasing influence of the Sovereign Pontiff. The dispatch probably refers to Belgium, Bavaria, Galicia, but it must be noted that Bavaria and Galicia are by no means conversable terms.

Senator ANTHONY is doing good service in exposing the extravagance which goes on under the eyes of Congress in the Printing Department. The public offices get out costly books in elegant, a mere whim—the public paying all the expense. Some of these books are printed in beautiful type on costly paper, and are bound in morocco and richly gilded. Ninety reads nine-tenths of them, but half a dozen persons are pleased, and the taxpayers groan. We hope Senator ANTHONY will cling to this subject until he has effected a reform. It is only by attacking special cases of extravagance that true economy can be obtained.

The Mormon "complaint" being driven in at the head in Utah, has broken out in long inland, where an eruption of lawyers, officers, soldiers and a Major-General has appeared at Pateboque, Schuylkill, Good-Ground and other places. This is a good symptom, for we have an idea that the dispersion of the Mormon disease—the opening out of its dark and cheerless economy to the common air and sunshine, will do it all the good in the world, and bring it into reasonable agreement with the customary order of society. We have brought out the Chinese and the Japanese, and now the Mormons are coming. This is as it should be; for they will all have at last that the world, instead of going back, in any Confucian sense, is actually going forward.

Is this Fifth-avenue abomination ever to be swept out of the town, or do the authorities merely intend to go on trifling with the public forever? What is the use of a mere body of men supposing that this is one of the exposures which will soon be forgotten by the people and the Press? Unluckily it is impossible to forget it. Look at the report we publish to-day from the Sanitary Committee of the Board of Health. There it is proved that the dust from the odious composition with which the street was plastered produces a most serious disease of the respiratory organs; and one physician mentions several cases, with full particulars, in which unmistakable injury was done to healthy persons. The dust, when it gets into the eye, is even dangerous. Is not all this proof enough? We might go on listening to Committees until Aldermen become honest, and yet know no more on the subject than we do now—which is, that the pavement is a most disgusting, dangerous and intolerable nuisance. It ought to be removed at the expense of the persons who laid it down. But if that is impracticable, somebody else must take it away and pitch it into the river. Are we to have the work postponed until the whole town is troubled with the Fifth-pavement malady as described by our doctors—namely, "conjunctivitis and palpebral œdema from closure of the lachrymal canals?"

Brooklyn seems disposed to anticipate New-York in getting up baths for the public, after the excellent example of Boston. The bill which Mr. CLARK is to introduce in the Assembly authorizes the Mayor and Common Council to expend money for the purpose. There is no intimation that they are to be free; but the establishment of baths available at a cheap rate would be a great fact in the "social science" of Brooklyn and a valuable auxiliary of the Board of Health. The disregard of such sanitary arrangements is a great reproach to any great city; and we hope before long to see New-York providing its baths for the people on a scale suitable to its great wealth and the wants of its crowded population.

It is only right to mention that a very large staff of men was placed upon Broadway yesterday to clear away the snow. Give everyone his due. The Street Contractor really does spend some money now and then, and yesterday he carried on operations in a way which would entitle him to a monument in the City Hall Park if he only did the same thing more frequently. Can nothing tempt him—not even the reward of an approving conscience—to do as good a day's work every day as he did yesterday?

A second-story steam railway on Third-avenue to Harlem has a firm and feasible appearance, to a first glance, since it would be double, covering, as we take it, the central strip of street occupied by the "lower road," and having parapets on each side to prevent any going off the track. The street would have its two clear sides, and, as the iron posts would be sixty feet apart, the vehicles on the ground could get along and go across with ease. The plan looks as well as any yet proposed, with a much cheaper figure for the estimate. And yet it has one weak point, since it would end at Fifth-street, when the citizens want it at the City Hall, the heart of New-York and centre of business.

The Panama Mail furnishes some additional details with reference to the reported discovery of an easy route for the proposed ship canal across the Isthmus of Darien. The line which it is proposed to follow, is described as starting from Puerto Escondido, on the Atlantic, up the valleys of two small rivers, through a low pass, which is claimed to have been discovered in the range of hills; and thence on the Pacific slope, following the valley of the Pucro to a junction with the river Tuyra, about a league above Santa Maria la Real, and some distance below the highest point reached by the tide. It is asserted that from this point the Tuyra is already navigable for vessels of the largest tonnage. It is likewise stated that the highest point along the whole route is only forty-six metres above the level of the sea; and according to the explorer, (M. LUCIEN DE PUYDE,) operations could be simultaneously commenced on twenty working sections, and the 125,000,000 cubic metres of material which he calculates will have to be removed, could be disposed of in from three to five years. A fourth part of the entire work is said to lie in the newly-discovered pass of the Cordilleras, which by a maximum height of only 44 metres and a length of 1,000, yields 31,000,000 cubic metres of the entire mass of material to be dealt with.

Reduction of Taxation—Views of the President.

The Washington dispatches of the Boston Advertiser of Thursday morning contain the following statement:

"The readiness of the President to avow a change of opinion on public questions when satisfied that he is wrong, is shown by what he now says about the reduction of taxation. In his Message last December he took ground against the project for reduction, and held that we would do better to continue our present policy for another year. He has lately spoken on the subject in private conversation, and says he has study and observation have convinced him that the country needs and expects some reductions. This declaration leads to the conclusion that he will assent to any measure of a reasonable character that is passed by Congress."

PARIS, Feb. 10—A. M.—There was considerable excitement among the people yesterday and last evening. The Police were active, disperse crowds here and there, but no outbreaks occurred. Many arrests were made. The military was also out in force, but its services were not needed. By 2 o'clock this morning the streets were nearly as quiet as usual, and at this hour the city is perfectly tranquil.

PARIS, Feb. 10—4 P. M.—The amount of bullion in the Bank of France has increased to 1,600,000 francs during the week....The city is still quiet. Armed Police are patrolling the quarter lately occupied by the rioters....GUSTAVE FLOURENS has not yet been arrested. He is said to have fled to Belgium....The grand ball at the Tuileries, announced for last evening, was postponed on account of the disorders....The vigilance of the Government authorities is by no means abated. Troops are near at hand which can be concentrated at a given point at the shortest notice.

PARIS, Feb. 10—9 P. M.—The city is tranquil. There is a strong feeling of excitement under the surface, but the ample precautions of the Government prevent any manifestation or disorder. Debate in the Corps Legislatif on Missing Documents—A Member Silenced—Another Journal Seized.

PARIS, Feb. 10.—In the Corps Legislatif today Mr. MAURICE RICHARD, Minister of Fine Arts, in answer to an interpellation regarding the documents missing from the Archives of the Government, said that some letters of NAPOLEON I. were missing, but they were in such hands that he would take the responsibility of leaving them there. M. KERATRY was dissatisfied with the explanation, and charged that the present Cabinet was no longer a Parliamentary Ministry, but belonged to the Court. For this the Deputy was called to order, but continued, declaring that it would be better to have ten archives for the documents proving that the present NAPOLEON sought to corrupt the leaders of the Legislative Body. The President here interrupted M. KERATRY and refused to allow him to proceed with his remarks. The journal La Marbre has been seized and its director arrested....The report that M. PREVOST-PARADOL is to go to Washington as Minister of France is contradicted.

Proceedings in the British Parliament—Writ for a New Election in Tipperary—The Red River Revolt in the Senate of Canada.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—In the House of Lords, to-day, Lord REDESDALE, Chairman of the Committee, said bills were pending for the construction of twenty-four street railways, with an aggregate length of 145 miles. Of these bills, seven related to lines to be authorized in the streets of London. He advised that an official inquiry be made on the subject. The Earl of KIMBERLEY promised that the Government would make an investigation. The Earl of KIMBERLEY submitted correspondence between England and the United States on the Alabama claims, and the House adjourned....In the House of Commons, Mr. BEAUMONT gave notice of the introduction of a bill to relieve the Bishops from attendance at the sittings of the House of Lords. The Marquis of HARTINGTON, the Postmaster-General, explained that the confusion in the telegraphic service was due to the inexperience of the new employes, the bad state of the weather and the sudden increase of business. He implored the public to have patience, as the trouble was temporary. Mr. GLADSTONE moved that as O'DONOVAN ROSSA could not, under the law, take a seat in the House of Commons, a new writ of election be issued for Tipperary. Mr. HENRY MATTHEWS, member for Dungarvon, opposed the motion. The Solicitor-General, admitting that ROSSA's crime was not treason, said that nevertheless attainder attached, and therefore the motion was within the powers of the House. Mr. JOHNSTON made a speech against the motion. Mr. GATHORNE HARDY argued that if ROSSA was a member of the House he would be liable to expulsion. The course of the Government in this case would, therefore, have his support. Sir ROUNDELL PALMER concurred in the opinion expressed by the Solicitor-General. After speeches against the motion by Messrs. BOUVERIE and GREGORY, a vote was taken, with the following result: For Mr. GLADSTONE's motion, 281; against, 61. Notice was given of a bill providing for a reorganization of the Mint, and making the Chancellor of the Exchequer ex officio Master of the Mint. Mr. MONSELL, Under Secretary for the Colonies, referred to the Red River disturbances and attributed the opposition there to Governor MCDOUGALL to his misconception of his powers. He said instructions had been forwarded to the Governor. Home adjourned.....The shareholders of the Grand Trunk Railroad approve of consolidation with the Lake Huron road.....A bill has been prepared, which will be submitted to Parliament at an early day, for making the income on the consols payable quarterly.....The House this morning opposed the Government proposition for guaranteeing emigration to Canada....The Admiralty Office will sell a number of war steamers at PLOVER on the close of February.....There is an active speculation in telegraph stocks in commercial quarters.....The English Government has declined to propose a reduction in the tobacco duties, as requested by a delegation.

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 10.—At a meeting held at Fort Garry, Winnipeg, on the 21st ult., a letter was read from Sir JOHN YOUNG, Governor-General of the New Dominion, in which he says, "the people may rely upon it that respect and protection will be extended to the different religious persuasions; that titles to every description of property will be guarded, and that all franchises that have existed or which the people may prove themselves qualified to exercise shall be duly continued or liberally conferred." A message from Earl GRANVILLE to Sir JOHN YOUNG was also read, to the effect that "the Queen had heard with surprise and regret that certain unauthorized persons had banded themselves together to oppose by force the entrance of the Lieutenant-Governor into our territory at Red River. Her Majesty does not mistrust the loyalty of her subjects to the settlement, and can only ascribe to misunderstanding and misrepresentations their opposition to the change so plainly for their advantage. She relies on your Government to explain the misunderstanding, and conciliate the good will of the people of the Red River." The dispatch concludes: "The Queen expects from her representative that, as he will always be ready to relieve well-founded grievances, so will he be ready to exercise all power and authority she has intrusted to him in support of order and the suppression of unlawful disturbances."

The audience was composed principally of citizens of Columbus, and the hall was about one-third full. Mrs. D. CUTZER, of Cleveland, President of the Ohio Woman's Suffrage Association, called the Convention to order. Mrs. E. F. CRAIG, of Dayton, was appointed Secretary. Prayer was offered by Rev. G. W. The Case of Dr. Schoepff—Favorable Vote of the Bill Relating to such Cases.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Feb. 10.—It is reported that Governor GRARY has refused to approve the bill passed last week directing the Supreme Court to review the evidence and decide capital cases on their merits. It was passed to cover the case of Dr. SCHOEPFF, now under sentence of death in Carbon. The Chief Justice had heard the case and denied a writ of error, but it was subsequently allowed by the Attorney-General and the case was argued before the Supreme Court yesterday. The bill is a general one, and provides in the first section that a writ of error in capital cases shall be allowed as a matter of right. The second section requires the Supreme Court to review all such cases on its merits. While favorable to the first section, the Governor will veto the bill because of his objections to the second section. Much evidence has been presented to the Governor in the case of Dr. SCHOEPFF, and it is generally conceded that, if the Supreme Court shall decide that there is no error in the record, he will not be inclined to extend clemency to the prisoner. The record as it now stands with the Executive is most damaging to Dr. SCHOEPFF.

SCRAPS.

The Colombian residents in Ecuador have drawn up and signed a petition, to be presented to the Congress in Bogota, relative to the treaty which has been arranged between the two Republics of Colombia and Ecuador. The petition is strongly condemnatory of the new treaty, and is ably seconded by a writer in Los Andes, of Guayaquil, who asserts that the treaty is inimical to the dignity of Colombia, inasmuch as it allows its citizens, unless willing, upon arrival in Ecuador, to be enrolled in the army or navy, to be subject to all contributions, whether of money or goods, to be deprived of their goods for private purposes, without previous indemnity, and, finally, to be subject to all infelicities and all chances to which the natives of the country are liable.....On the morning of Dec. 16, 1869, a fire was discovered, which spread with great rapidity over that part of Guayaquil known as Cuidad Vieja, destroying some eighty houses, and many families of the poorer class are without habitations. ANNEKE JANS AND TRINITY.

Statement of the Claims of the Heirs of Annetje Jans.

From time to time letters are received at the Mayor's office making inquiries as to the probability of the claims of the heirs of ANNETJE JANS to the property now in possession of the Corporation of Trinity Church being allowed or adjusted. The Mayor has, therefore, caused the following statement of the case to be prepared, showing most conclusively that all such claims are entirely visionary, the Church property being held under a title which has been adjudged to be valid by the highest Court in the State.

The Bouwerie of the Dominie JONAS (or BOGARDUS) as made to the old BOGARDUS or Trinity Church, a Band., Ch. R., etc. was founded, on the following allegations:

ANNETJE JANS, in 1669, was seized of the lands now in possession of Trinity Church. She devised it to her seven children, and died. That year, in 1669, in the same year, only of the devisees of ANNETJE JANS executed a deed of transport to Governor LOVELACE. The Church entered under the transport and held under it as tenant in common with those of the said devisees who had not conveyed or or written their consents. The complainant, as one of such descendants, claimed to be entitled to one-fifth of one-sixth part of the lands as tenant in common with the Church, owner of the other five-sixths. The Church, in their suit, put in a plea and answer. The answer denied the material statements of the bill. The plea was that Queen ANNE, being in possession and occupation of the lands in question, and in receipt of the rents and profits to her sole and proper use and benefit, by her letters patent dated Nov. 12, 1705, granted them to the Church; that the Church on that day entered under such patent and became seized of the premises in fee, claiming to be of right sole and exclusive owner in fee simple, and that ever since, from the date of the patent, and the time of the bill of complaint, it had been in the uninterrupted sole, exclusive and actual possession of the premises, claiming to hold the same as sole and exclusive owner in fee simple during the whole of that time, &c. This plea having been demurred to was adjudged by the Chancellor to be insufficient, and, on appeal at the hearing in the suit above mentioned, it was sustained by overwhelming proofs. A reference to the able opinion of Vice-Chancellor SANFORD, reported in 4 Sandford's C. R., 633, will show how complete and unanswerable was the evidence of adverse possession.

The case is stated very short, it really an abstract of every point in the adjudged case upon which the decision turned. It is believed that no case related to the title can be presented which will not necessarily be governed by the same principles. That came was decided in the year 1847. Twenty years have since then elapsed. Now, the Church has been in adverse possession since Queen ANNE's grant, for 165 years.

The Terrible January Snow Storm—Surrounded of Valuable Property and Almost Loss of Life—Sad Particulars—A Band of Indians Frozen.

From our Occasional Correspondent.

OMAHA, Neb., Tuesday, Jan. 25, 1870.

The storm of Saturday, Jan. 15, 1870, will long be remembered as one of the most fearful that has ever occurred in the West. It extended over a great space of country, and many people and large quantities of live stock of all description were destroyed by it. I can give you some incidents of the storm that you may judge of its severity. While the snow was flying so thick that no one could see ten feet in advance two brothers named LEOPOLD and JACOB UNGER, who live near Columbus, Neb., on the Pacific Railroad, left their house for the purpose of going to the barn, only a few rods off, to attend to their stock. They soon got lost, and wandering about in every direction in the blinding snow and sleet, trying to find their way home, or shelter of some kind, although one of them fell and expired. The other then stripped off his dead brother's clothing and covered himself with it, and alone tried to find his way back to the house; but after going on about forty rods further, he, too, fell, and was soon covered up with snow and ice and frozen to death. These young men were Hungarians, and were highly respected for their probity and good conduct. Their remains were found on the following Monday about two miles from their home, and the tracks which they had made showed that they had, during the prevalence of the storm, travelled over fifteen miles.

A SAD WORK.

Mr. Dowd, who lives on Vermillion River, about four miles from Vermillion City, Dakota, had a family consisting of his wife and three children, aged respectively 10, 8 and 4 years. The house in which he lived was a poor one, and very cold, and being without much fuel, he started to visit a neighbor some forty rods distant, when the storm first began, taking the 8 year-old child in his arms. His wife followed with the other two. On the way the father became separated from the mother and the other two children, and he continued on until he found his neighbor's house and went in to get warm. He waited some time, but his wife not coming in, he started out to look for her, and give the alarm to his friends. Every effort was made to discover the whereabouts of the missing wife and children, but without success, until Monday, the 17th, when they were found about seventy-five rods from the house, frozen stiff. They had lost their way, and the density of the flying snow had prevented their finding the house.

A BAND OF INDIANS FROZEN.

About thirty warriors of the Pawnee tribe started out from their country a week before the storm to find some buffalo, and, if in luck, get a few scalps from their old enemies the Sioux. When out the party divided, some going south, where they found some buffalo, and returned well loaded with meat. The others equally fortunate fell in with a party of Sioux, killed several of them, and started back with about forty captured ponies. On their return, the Sioux about eight miles from Long Tree Station, met a most terrible storm of Sunday, and all perished within a day's march of their homes. The bodies of these Indians, with their own and their captured ponies, were all found lying dead together, partly covered with snow and ice, by the runners who were sent out to discover their whereabouts.

SNOWED IN ON THE RAILROAD.

On account of the storm the Pullman Hotel Express train, from San Francisco, was twenty-four hours behind time, owing to the fact that the telegraph poles and wires were in many places and the snow drifted so deep as to keep trains from traveling by becoming entangled in the locomotive. They had plenty of provisions on board the train, so that there was no suffering among the passengers, though several of the employes had their hands, feet and ears frozen. This is without doubt the most dreadful storm ever known in the West since it was settled by the whites, and as yet no estimate can be made as to the destruction of life which it has caused.

The Murder of Commodore Lone Star by Blanket Indians.

From the San Francisco Bulletin, Jan. 24.

A few days since ANDREW D. SMITH, Deputy Internal Revenue Commissioner, received a telegram from Major MURPHY, editor of the Alaska Commercial Victoria, Jan. 18, conveying to him the news that his brother, Commodore Lone Sterrs, was killed by the Indians. The lines being down directly after the dispatch was received, no particulars could be learned until the arrival of the United States Quartermaster's steamer Newbern on Monday morning, which brought down the remains of Commodore Sterrs, also his wife and child. From our correspondent we gain the following account of the trouble with the Indians in which Commodore Sterrs lost his life:

It seems some time ago a Chief, who was had sold whiskey to the Indians. One, by the name of Sitwan, killed on the night of December 26th, his squaw so terribly that she died in two days afterwards. Commodore SMITH interceded and sent for a detachment to take Sitwan to Old Sitka House, and had the Indian women taken into the house of one of his Lieutenants to prevent a further outbreak. Sitwan was in the house, and was in the act of being tied by the Lieutenant of his wife, and offering a blanket with the laundress, which he had, and which he was present were cause of his detention, bit off one of her fingers and immediately escaped to the Indian village. Lieutenant BORROWS, the commanding officer of the post, immediately dispatched Lieutenant LOUCKS with a detachment of men to seize the Indian. Sitwan was soon found, but refused to accompany the guard, and an alarm was rapidly spread throughout the Indian camp. Lieutenant LOUCKS, finding himself about to be overpowered, ordered his men to seize Sitwan, who, with his friends, resisted. No alternative was left but to give the order to fire on them. Sitwan was killed and his brother wounded. Lieutenant LOUCKS then returned to the garrison, bearing the wounded Indian.

As soon as Commodore SMITH heard of the difficulty he sent his wife and child inside the garrison, and having been very friendly with the Indians, and feeling that he had great influence with them, volunteered his services, and against the advice of his friends, started off for the Indian camp to pacify them. He had hardly left his door when he was shot down by an Indian lying in ambush. He staggered a few steps towards the garrison, and fell on a log. The officers at the post hearing the firing, immediately ran down and found him insensible, and hastily carried him to a litter took him to the hospital, where Dr. KIKES dressed his wounds. He had received thirteen shots in the abdomen and three in the wrist. He lived twenty-two hours, suffering great agony most of the time, but died quietly on Sunday night, Dec. 26, his last moments being soothed by every attention kind friends could give.

Sunday morning Lieutenant LOUCKS sent out a flag of truce demanding the immediate surrender of the murderer, making the destruction of the Indian village, at noon, the ultimatum. The flag of truce party was met by the Indians in their war paint. They refused the surrender of the murderer, Scut-doo, or to have any intercourse with the garrison. Every effort was made by the military officers to secure the murderer without resorting to hostile measures, but without avail. The Indians placed guards on the roads, leading to the fort, and commenced firing at every living thing in sight. The garrison soon dislodged them, and opened on the Indian village. Subsequently some of the more friendly Indians secured Scut-doo and brought him in.

Hostilities ceased, and a court martial being organized, at which all the Chiefs were present, Scut-doo was sentenced to be hanged. All the Chiefs included, admitted the justice of the sentence, and requested that the execution should be postponed to be hanged. All the Chiefs included, admitted the justice of the sentence, and requested that the execution should be postponed to Dec. 29. The condemned said that his command was that that he was ready to die; that he was a Chief himself, and that he had killed a great Chief, meaning Commodore SMITH; that he bore no enmity or ill-will to Commodore SMITH; on the contrary, he had always treated him well, and had hoped that the Great Spirit above had commanded him to kill some one, and that he had obeyed the command, and was sorry that Commodore Sterrs was the victim.

The execution took place in full view of the Indian town, and the Chiefs and their warriors were present. When the house was placed around his neck he asked if all was ready, and receiving an affirmative answer, jumped off the scaffold before the drop fell. At sunset the body was handed over to his tribe. With the execution of Scut-doo all hostilities ceased and now all is quiet and peaceable. Commodore SMITH's body was embalmed and safely housed in the United States Quartermaster's steamer Newbern to take the remains to San Francisco.

On the arrival of the Newbern, Saturday morning, Gov. Graves and Gen. Ord ordered the steamer Alpharetta to proceed alongside the Newbern and receive the remains to the city. The funeral takes place today, (Wednesday,) at 1 o'clock, from Calvary Church. Commodore Sterrs was well known on this coast, having been connected with several steamship lines as Commander. He spent a large portion of his life in the South-Seas. At the opening of the rebellion cast his lot with his Southern friends. He was Commodore in charge of the Naval Department of the Gulf, and the bold attack on the Naval fleet off Galveston, Jan. 1, 1863, was his last exploit of that nature and the Federal steamer is likely to be well known, and forms a prominent event in the history of the late war. He was a warm-hearted, whole-souled man, and leaves many friends to mourn his sad fate. During the past year he was engaged in the fur trade at Fort Wrangel.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

At the Exchange Salesroom, Thursday, Wednesday & Co. sold the following real estate, at city auction, by Messrs. Bleecker, Bangs & Co., twenty city lots, partly adjoining, in the vicinity of the Bulkhead in Greenpoint, and the south side of the south pier, the property being sold by order of the Commissioners of Pilots, and the money arising therefrom to be applied to the support of the Pilot Fund. The improved portion extends towards the street 100 feet, and has upon it steam saw-mill and planing mill, shop, boiler and engine house, and a brick dwelling. Beyond the outer line of the improved property the purchaser has the right to fill in solid to the Bulkhead line, 50,000 square feet of surface. He has also the privilege of obtaining a grant of the water lights to the pier line, which is 200 feet beyond the bulkhead. Sixty-five thousand dollars of the purchase money remains on bond and mortgage. The bidding for this property was quite brisk, and there appeared to be a sharp competition, chiefly between two bidders. The entire property, with the privileges attaching to its ownership, was struck down at $125,000. The same auctioneers disposed of three lots on the north side of South Ninth-street, between Sixth and Seventh streets, Williamsburg, one of them having upon it a three-story brick-front brick house, 21 feet by 46, with a verandah and porte-cochere. The entire property, 64 feet front by 100 deep to the rear side, and 116 feet on the west side, was sold together for the sum of $16,500.

ROBERTS & McKENZIE offered two superior lots, sales, under the direction of GEORGE NEWHALL, Referee. First, they disposed of a plot of ground on Hillside-street, Nagle-avenue and the Boulevard, measuring on the four sides respectively 168.21 feet, 141.4 feet, 100.10 feet and 94.5 feet. This did not attract much attention, and was struck down at $3,650. They then offered a four-story brown-stone house on One Hundred and Thirtieth-street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues, which was sold for $17,000.

LONG ISLAND.

Mrs. CATHARINE RAPELYEA, formerly a member of the Newtown Episcopal Church, now deceased, made the following bequests in her will: Bishop BAYNE, China Mission, $500; Bishop PAYNE, African Mission, $500; New-York Magdalen Asylum, $500; Five Points House of Industry, $500; fund for the relief of aged and disabled clergymen, $500; church foundation fund, $500.

Mr. NEWELL VAIL, a Long Island hermit, familiarly known as "Uncle NEWELL," and over 90 years of age, who resides in an old dilapidated building in Orient, came near losing his life under very peculiar circumstances, a few days since. While on the top of an old oven which joins his dwelling, and which is in a half tumbled-down state, he fell and got his head wedged in between the house and the oven so that he could not extricate himself. In this trying situation he remained all day and through the next night, which happened to be one of the coldest of the season, and not until the middle of the forenoon did aid come to him. It happened that Mrs. SYBIL TUTTLE, an old lady and a near neighbor, not seeing him stirring in the morning went to investigate and found him in the situation. When relieved his feet and legs were frozen, and it is feared that he cannot survive.

A new mail route has been established by the Postmaster-General on Long Island, between the terminus of the South Side Railroad at Patchogue and the Long Island Railroad at Medford. CHARLES R. ROSS, of Patchogue, has been appointed to take charge of the mails on the Long Island Railroad train, who will now be made up for the South Side Post Office and transferred, via Ross's Express at Medford to Patchogue. Hereafter mail matter for that line had been taken to New-York and redistributed for the South Side Railroad, reaching its destination the next day.

At Greenport the recent storm was very severe. The schooner Marietta Smith, at her dock, was badly checked. A new yacht belonging to VAIL, BENJAMIN & Co. was badly injured, and a number of carryaway boats, used in the oil fisheries, were driven ashore and permanently damaged. The large buoy on Long Beach Bar, at the entrance of Greenport Harbor, was carried away and driven ashore on Pleasing's Point, over three miles from its proper position.

A grand supper and entertainment was given by Montauk Lodge, No. 208, I. O. of G. T., at the Greenport House, Greenport, Wednesday evening, to the lady friends of the Lodge. The was a return entertainment to one given by the ladies to the Lodge about two weeks since. The large and commodious rooms of the Hotel were specially fitted up for the occasion. The following programme responded to toasts: J. M. Wells, R. S. Mayone, J. A. Corwin, W. H. Clark, Jr., D. O. Crawford, A. S. Horton, W. F. Preston, and G. H. Case.

Nothing concerning the whereabouts of THOMAS PARRELL, who disappeared from Hunter's Point so mysteriously on Wednesday of last week, has been developed. The bodies found on sawmill dock have been identified as his, and it is believed that he committed suicide, though no motive can be adduced.

The Baptists of Jamaica have inaugurated a new religious movement, and nightly visit the sorrowing in the locality and pray, sing and exhort for an hour or two, hoping thereby to make converts. They have had several meetings in the harbor of JAMES S. HUSSEN, in Jamaica. Religious revivals are also in vogue in Bag Harbor. Thirty new members have been received into the Methodist Church and thirteen baptized.

The people of Jamaica are having a grand temperance revival. A Father Mathew Temperance and Benevolent Society has just been formed.

The fifteenth regular session of the second Congress of the Greenpoint Senate was held at their hall, corner of Union and Meserole avenues, last Wednesday evening. President FELIZE in the chair, and Mr. R. OVERTON, Clerk. The proceedings consisted of musical literary exercises, interspersed with choice selections of music, both instrumental and vocal, all of which were unusually entertaining and instructive. Regular sessions are held weekly, and there is no charge for admission.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY.

GILES BEZNARD and HENRY COGAN, a couple of New-Yorkers, were overhauled in Morrisania, a few nights since, having in their possession five game cocks, which were supposed to have been fighting at a noted cockpit in the neighborhood. Officer RILEY took the offenders before Justice HAUPTMAN, who allowed them to go on their own recognizances, keeping their game cocks as security for their appearance, which they failed to make, and the game cocks are still in the cells awaiting claimants.

On the 19th of January a quantity of railroad iron, valued at $80, belonging to the Harlem Railroad Company, was stolen from their dock, at Port Morris. Suspicion fell on PATRICK McMAHON, a junk dealer of Stanton-street, New-York, was arrested and held for examination, which took place on Wednesday afternoon before Justice HAUPTMAN, when one WM. MOORE, a slight acquaintance of New-York, appeared to testify in behalf of McMAHON. Moore was at once identified by a saloon keeper as one of the parties who had stolen the railroad iron. MOORE and McMAHON were therefore both held to bail in the sum of $500.

HENRY FERLIGH, who has been keeping a real estate and intelligence office in Plimpton Building, corner of Second-avenue and Ninth-street, New-York, was taken before Justice HAUPTMAN on Wednesday evening, on a charge of swindling. WILLIAM WATSON, of Mott Haven, stated that he had agreed for a partnership with Mr. WATSON and paid the latter $100, which he was induced by the representations of the latter to pay him into cash, and gave him a promissory note for $60, but soon discovered that he had been swindled, and caused the arrest of FERLIGH, who, after a hearing, was held to bail in the sum of $500 to await the action of the Grand Jury of Westchester County. Late evening he was still in the cells, having been unable to procure the required bail.

Governor HOFFMAN appointed MARCUS L. CORE, Esq., of Sing Sing, and Mr. STATES BURTON, of New-Rochelle, Loan Commissioners for Westchester County.

Two thieves at New-Rochelle, a few days ago, stole the contents of the money drawer of the Spring Hotel and drove off at full speed. They were pursued and captured. They gave their names as GEORGE THOMPSON and WILLIAM BRITZ. One of them escaped while on his way to the jail. A valuable horse and wagon found in their possession and supposed to have been stolen was transferred to the Property Clerk of the Metropolitan Police, in New-York.

THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE.

Annual Election of Officers—Gossom for Henry Tucker—Gallagher of Richmond—Speech of Mr. Stevens—The Day—The Sentimental Idea.

The forty-first annual election for officers of the American Institute took place yesterday afternoon between the hours of 3 and 5 P. M. So far as outward appearances were concerned, the election passed off harmoniously enough, but a glance at the table covered with printed tickets of varied color and quality, and the presence of "ticketeering" individuals who discoursed eloquently and learnedly on the property of the Institute, and finally presented you with the "regular ticket," together with the animated conversations of the members, showed that the harmony was to a great extent in the surface. Orderly and quiet the election certainly was, but the members appeared to be split up into as many factions as a country town at a charter election, and the tactics and doings of the leaders revealed a strategy which would have pleased old Walter Kissam, and skill in pulling wires which would have done no discredit to a political council.

At 3 o'clock Messrs. EDWARD WALKER, JAMES H. SACHERY and LEWIS CASS were sworn in to duty as election inspectors, and the voting hall was set rolling by Colonel HALL, who deposited the first ballot. Quite a number were ready in line and voting went on briskly. At 4, 125 votes had been cast; at 4, 300 ballots were in the "urn," or rather its box. Finding that the interest in the election was very great, and the different parties more numerous than at any time for thirty years past, our reporter sought to converse with a member of the Institute who is known to be "unfortunate enough to have a partner who will not go with him at all. Upper ten ladies or strangers will hardly be an adequate idea of how to approach these girls as well as those who are familiar with the class." "That's true," he replied, "and we will attend to all these details when the place is in running order, and the laundry door is closed."

This laundry door did not seem to be near consolation. It is, as before stated, what was recently Kyle's famous rat pit. Now, however, it presents the appearance of a closed lumber room, and, it seems fair to conclude, will not be a working laundry for some time to come.

Seizure of the Merchandise of a Large German Importing Firm.

Yesterday and on Wednesday the Custom House authorities were busily engaged in removing from the store of the importers, Messrs. WIEDMUELLER & Co., No. 30 Reade-street, a large quantity of merchandise which has been seized by Deputy Collector CLARK, Chief of the Seizure Bureau, in the Custom House. THE PERRY TRIAL.

Motion to Admit the Accused to Bail—Argument of Counsel.

In the case of EDWIN PERRY, who has been tried twice for the murder of THOS. HAYES, the night watchman at HARSICK'S stores, and in whose case the jury failed to agree upon a verdict, before Judge GILBERT at the Supreme Court yesterday morning, his counsel, CHARLES SPENCER, moved to have him admitted to bail.

Mr. SPENCER argued that the prisoner should be admitted to bail, from the fact that he had been confined since the 26th of December, and that on each trial the jury had failed to agree; also that he had a wife and six children depending upon him for support.

District-Attorney MORRIS opposed the motion, contending that he was undoubtedly guilty of the crime with which he was charged, and that it was not unusual to try a prisoner three times. He then proceeded to show the Court that it was not a proper case to bail, and contended that the charge of Judge PRATT to the jury was calculated to mislead them—that it gave them mistaken ideas of the law. The man was either guilty of murder in the first degree or he was not guilty at all. He wanted the Court to compare the charge of Judge PRATT with the charge delivered in the case on GONZOLA and PRILLCRES, but Judge GILBERT said he hardly thought it was proper for him to do so.

Mr. MORRIS then proceeded to review the charge of Judge PRATT, which he contended, put a wrong construction on the law.

The Opera Ball.

The Academy of Music was compactly crowded last evening, on the occasion of the fourth annual Opera Ball, the origin of which is due to Mr. MAX MARESKY, who first introduced it among the regular winter festivities of this City four years ago. In imitation of the balls which usually follow the close of the opera season in France and in Italy. The ball was opened by a large assemblage of fashionable and social people and was remarkable for the elegance and
